Tolls to be retained at Water Gap bridge

MORRISVILLE, Pa. — The Delaware River Toll Bridge Commission Tuesday night proposed retaining toll charges on the Delaware Water Gap Bridge and building two additional free bridges across the river.

During a commission meeting here, the commission passed a motion to build free bridges at 178 at Easton and Burlington-Bristol and to retain tolls at the Gap bridge and on the Rt. 22 bridge at Easton, in addition to three other toll bridges.

The motion was passed pending a legal decision to determine if the commission is overstepping the terms of the two-state bridge compact.

Edward Driebe, Stroudsburg businessman and former commission chairman, voted for the motion, but after filing a protest that, in his opinion, the motion was illegal.

The new bridges are expected to cost approximately $50 million.

Driebe claimed that the commission was bound by the preamble to the compact which states one purpose of the commission is to prevent large expenditures of public funds on bridges.

He also said that the compact forbids the commission from building a free bridge within 10 miles of an existing toll bridge.

If a free bridge is built to carry 178 over the river the span will be within 10 miles of the existing toll bridge at Easton.

The motion was made by Dave Goldberg, commission chairman and commissioner of transportation in New Jersey.

The motion was seconded by Robert Bartlett, Pennsylvania's secretary of highways.

The motion was passed against the legal opinion of the commission's solicitors Carl Lindsey, New Hope, N.J., and Al Seiss, Alpha, N.J., and Anderson Page, Philadelphia.

The majority of the commission passed the action with the hopes that the compact can be amended by the legislatures of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the United States Congress.

Against public interest, Driebe claimed that the building of two new free facilities and retaining tolls on the commission's five other bridges was in the interest of interstate trucking firms but against the public interest.

The new interstate highway system will bypass the City of Easton, but local residents will still use the toll bridge in the middle of town, Driebe said. Driebe unsuccessfully attempted to introduce a motion to remove the tolls at the Water Gap and Rt. 22 bridges at the same time that the free bridges are built at Burlington-Bristol and at 178 at Easton.

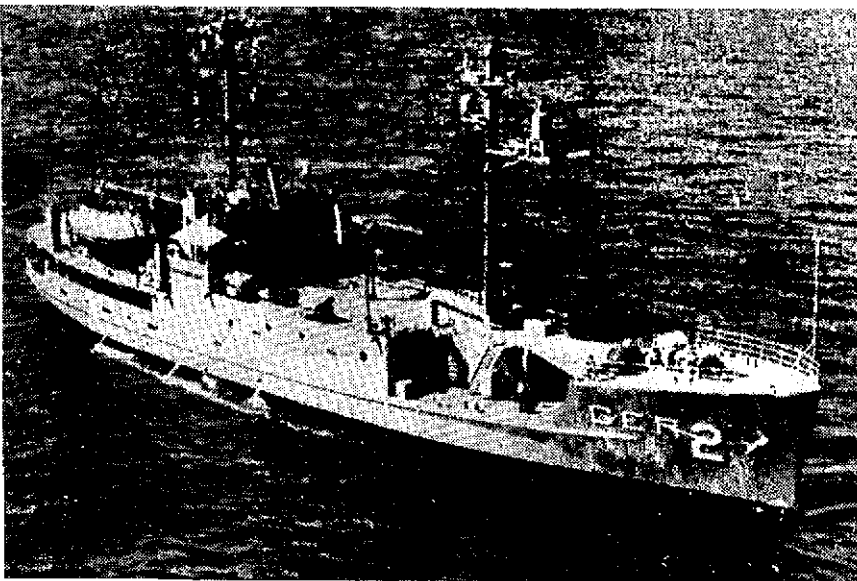

Aide says Shafer hiring Negroes

STROUDSBURG — A representative of the Pennsylvania Republican Committee told the Monroe County Negro GOP Council that members of the minority groups are being successfully employed by the Shafer Administration.

Gordon Hicks, a special assistant to Jack Jordan, GOP state chairman, told the council in Republican headquarters on S. Seventh St., Stroudsburg, said that qualified Negroes are being employed by the state.

Hicks also pointed out the need to work to register new voters in the party. Edward Francis of 54 N. Second St., Stroudsburg, announced that he will seek election as committeeman from Stroudsburg's First Ward.

Francis is the first Negro to hold a committee post in the county. Last year, he was appointed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Harry Mullins.

Marines, big guns, jets hit Reds' jungle hideouts

SAIGON (AP) — A fresh U.S. Marine battalion took up battle stations and big guns and jet bombers blasted at suspected Communist concentrations Tuesday in jungles and bamboo thickets of the inflamed Khe Sanh hill country.

Enemy shells rained sporadically on a Marine observation post atop Hill 881, one of three peaks overlooking northwestern approaches to South Vietnam that the Leathernecks wrested from Hanoi regulars in bloody fighting last April.

Regarding bitter clashes over the weekend as but the prelude to a massive enemy offensive, the U.S. Command disclosed a brigade of the 1st Air Cavalry Division—more than 3,000 men—has moved north to back up Marines and South Vietnamese troops based in the two upper provinces, Quang Tri and Thua Thien. Allied strength there mounted to more than 50,000 men.

Move quickly. The air cavalrymen are positioned in the Hue-Phu Bai area, 50 miles south of the demilitarized zone. Transported by helicopters, they can react quickly to enemy moves at hot spots below the DMZ. They make up the first American Army detachment to be based north of Da Nang, the U.S. Marine headquarters in Vietnam.

The allies pulled a garrison from another district town to consolidate their military forces. This time it was Huong Hoa, about two miles southeast of Khe Sanh. Khe Sanh was abandoned Monday by three mixed platoons of Marines and South Vietnamese—totaling about 150 men.

South Vietnamese military headquarters said 200 militiamen and an undetermined number of civilians left Huong Hoa after three days of Communist attacks in which 18 Vietnamese were killed. Four U.S. advisers were wounded.

The militiamen, who declared their own fire and supporting planes had killed 250 of the enemy, were transferred to a Special Forces camp at Lang Vei, four miles west of Khe Sanh.

As late as last December both Khe Sanh and Huong Hoa had been classified by the U.S. mission as secure. Classifications for secure areas are A, B or C, depending on just how strong their defenses are rated. These two towns were in the C category because of their proximity to enemy lines.

Hundreds of the civilians were airlifted to Da Nang. Others chose to stay put, preferring to face the hazards of possible

Tax increase shelved again

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's tax increase proposal went back on the shelf Tuesday—but perhaps not quite as far back as the House Ways and Means Committee pushed it twice before.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mill, D-Ark., advised the President's spokesmen to spend the next month or so seeing if they could cut spending even deeper than the $2.5 billion to $3 billion reductions offered as part of the price for a 10 per cent income tax surcharge.

Communist control to life as refugees.

Squadrons of B52 eight-engine Stratofortresses and jet fighter-bombers kept up pressure on North Vietnamese buildup areas menacing the Khe Sanh Valley, 16 miles south of the DMZ and seven miles east of the Laotian frontier.

They were estimated to have dropped 1,000 tons of explosives on suspected Communist gun positions, staging areas and infiltration routes in a 24-hour period Monday and Tuesday.

Some of the targets were only a mile from the Communist-held sector of eastern Laos, where North Vietnam's 325C Division was reported filtering units across the frontier.

A U.S. Marine F4 Phantom dive-bombing one Red position was shot down Monday by ground fire. The two crewmen parachuted and, with only slight injuries, were rescued.

The North Vietnamese had killed 20 Marines.

U.S. to draw line in Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A high government source said Tuesday a line across Laos to block North Vietnamese movement will be electronic and will include neither ground barriers nor U.S. troops.

He implied that devices dropped from airplanes as well as sophisticated airborne devices will be used to check on the movement of North Vietnamese down the Ho Chi Minh trail of eastern Laos to South Vietnam.

Actually, the United States has long used electronic systems, such as infrared cameras, to photograph truck convoys at night and U.S. bombers have been called in to destroy these movements.

This was confirmed officially for the first time Tuesday in Bangkok, Thailand's capital. Prime Minister Thanon Kittikachorn said U.S. planes were bombing the Ho Chi Minh trail from bases in Thailand.

Thanon told reporters the trail was being "constantly bombed." Air Force sources said much of the bombing takes place at night when big Communist truck convoys are on the move.

It was first believed the infiltration line in Laos would be an extension of the fence and mine barrier across the northern border of South Vietnam and Washington reports have said that it already was being pushed into Laos.

The government of Laos, officially neutral, has been embarrassed by these reports. The high government source said he was unaware any such extension had been carried out.

Sailors wounded; serious incident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some crewmen aboard the U.S. Navy "intelligence collection" ship Pueblo were wounded when four North Korean patrol boats captured the American vessel, sources said Tuesday.

The White House described the incident as "a very serious situation." Congressional leaders reacted angrily.

Rep. Bob Wilson, D-Calif., called the seizure "obviously an act of war" and Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., said it was a very serious breach of international law that "almost amounts to an act of war."

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said intelligence-gathering activity of the kind engaged in by the Pueblo "certainly exposes" the United States to such incidents, and commented "We got caught unexpectedly."

Fulbright said the incident is very serious "if, as reported, the ship was on the high seas."

The United States asked Soviet Russia to deliver an urgent request to North Korea for the immediate release of the ship and its 83-man crew.

The Pentagon said nothing about casualties or shooting when it announced surrender of the 935-ton Pueblo to North Korean patrol boats near midnight Monday.

The U.S. statement said the incident occurred in international waters about 25 miles off North Korea.

Two guns. The Defense Department said the Pueblo, armed with two machine guns, reported "she had not used any weapons" before becoming the first U.S. naval vessel to surrender at sea since the Civil War.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk termed the North Korean action a matter of "most gravity." Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said it seemed to be "a clear violation of international law."

In the House, Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan said, "If the vessel was cruising in international waters, as was apparently the case, there is no justification whatever for the action taken by the North Koreans."

Rep. William H. Bates, R-Mass., senior GOP member of the House Armed Services Committee, called the seizure "an act of piracy."

U.S. recognizes Greek regime

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The United States dropped its boycott of the Greek regime Tuesday and resumed normal diplomatic contacts with the leaders who quashed King Constantine's counter coup in December.

U.S. Ambassador Philip H. Barlow signified the end of Washington's snub by calling on Foreign Minister Panayiotis Pinielis.

Module receives high score

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Space agency officials reported Tuesday that America's first Lunar Module achieved 66 per cent of its major test objectives in a remarkable performance that practically assured the craft's next flight would be manned.

Experts began extensive examination of data received from the eight-hour flight, which was rescued from possible failure Monday by quick action from a ground control crew headed by youthful flight director Eugene Kranz.

George M. Low, manager of the Apollo spacecraft program office, said, "I hope that our data evaluation will confirm and will show with this flight and with some additional ground tests that we are ready to fly men in the Lunar Module."

If so, a second unmanned flight scheduled in May would be canceled and astronauts conceivably could ride the lunar landing craft on an earth orbit test late this year. That would be a rehearsal for a man-to-the-moon trip next year.

Crew superb. Dr. George E. Mueller, NASA associate administrator for manned space flight, called the performance of the Kranz flight crew superb.

"I think that you'll all agree," Mueller said, "that they did in fact succeed in what might have been a not very successful mission."

Chris Kraft, director of flight operations for NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center, said, "I think Mr. Kranz and the way he carried off the job was truly outstanding. I think that we achieved all the goals that we set out for ourselves."

"The one thing that we did not get from the flight was control of the engine from the Lunar Module guidance computer," Kraft said. "We will have to evaluate how important it is. It's my opinion that it's not too important and that we will be able to press on with the flight of men in the next Lunar Module. I sincerely hope that analysis of the data proves that to be so."

Trouble began four hours after the 31,000-pound Lunar Module was blasted into orbit Monday by a Saturn I rocket.

LBJ seeks $2.1 billion for new jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sent Congress a record-setting $2.1-billion manpower proposal Tuesday. It features a plan to attack hard core unemployment in the slums of the 15 largest cities.

In his first special message of 1968, Johnson said "The demand for more jobs is central to the expression of all our concerns and our aspirations—about cities, poverty, civil rights and the improvement of men's lives."

But the suggested new program, even if enacted promptly by Congress, could be expected to have little or no impact on restlessness in the slums this summer. This is so because its aim of providing 500,000 new jobs for slum dwellers would be carried out gradually over a three-year period.

Johnson, who took the unusual step of personally discussing his plan with newsmen shortly before it reached Capitol Hill, seemed particularly pleased that he had lined up advance pledges of cooperation from some of the nation's bluest blue-chip businessmen.

The President announced formation of a National Alliance of Businessmen to work with government on the program and said it would be headed by Henry Ford II, board chairman of the Ford Motor Co.

In his first special message of 1968, Johnson said "The demand for more jobs is central to the expression of all our concerns and our aspirations—about cities, poverty, civil rights and the improvement of men's lives."

But the suggested new program, even if enacted promptly by Congress, could be expected to have little or no impact on restlessness in the slums this summer. This is so because its aim of providing 500,000 new jobs for slum dwellers would be carried out gradually over a three-year period.

Johnson, who took the unusual step of personally discussing his plan with newsmen shortly before it reached Capitol Hill, seemed particularly pleased that he had lined up advance pledges of cooperation from some of the nation's bluest blue-chip businessmen.

The President announced formation of a National Alliance of Businessmen to work with government on the program and said it would be headed by Henry Ford II, board chairman of the Ford Motor Co.

'Cummer bandit' given 15 years

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal jury convicted William E. Zeiler Tuesday of two of eight bank holdups with which he was charged, and he was immediately sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Judge Joseph P. Willson sentenced the 52-year-old former North Side grocer only minutes after the jury of nine men and three women brought back its verdict.

Zeiler, who had been free on bond, was immediately taken into custody, his attorney, James P. McKenna Jr., made oral motions for a new trial, but the judge denied them.

Asked if he would appeal, McKenna said "I have to talk to Bill, but I anticipate that we will appeal."

The jury returned the verdicts shortly after 3 p.m., after deliberating about 12 hours over a two-day period.

William E. Zeiler

Zeiler also was convicted of two companion charges of using a deadly weapon in the holdups. The jury cleared him of six deadly weapon charges.

Zeiler appeared to take the verdicts calmly. He sat at the defense table flanked by his attorney, James P. McKenna Jr., and two of McKenna's aides.

Zeiler's wife, who has been at the trial constantly, sat in a front row with relatives. As the guilty verdicts were read, she bowed her head and nervously worked her lips, but didn't cry out.

About 50 persons were in the audience when the jury brought back the verdicts.

The jury convicted Zeiler in a $18,554 holdup at the Western Pennsylvania National Bank of office in Pittsburgh's Oakland section on June 30, 1966, and the $19,454 robbery of a Pittsburgh National Bank office in the city's Bloomfield section May 17, 1967.

The last holdup occurred just about a month before the FBI arrested Zeiler.

Justice still not decided

PITTSBURGH (AP) — State Supreme Court Justice Michael A. Musmanno, who still hasn't decided whether to run for the U.S. Senate, says nominating petitions were taken out for him in 25 counties Tuesday.

If petitions containing 100 names are secured in 10 counties, Musmanno would be nominated for the May primary.

Tuesday was the first day to get the petitions.

Musmanno must decide by Feb. 13, the last day petitions can be returned, whether he will run against Sen. Joseph Clark for the democratic nomination.

He said in an interview that he believed he could beat Clark in the primary except for Philadelphia, Clark's hometown.

Optimistic
"There is no doubt in my mind that, if I become a candidate, I will carry all of Western Pennsylvania. I believe I would also carry with big majorities the hard coal regions because the people there remember my fight against the Coal and Iron Police."

"I am now surveying the Philadelphia area, just as George Washington had to consider the Hessians before he crossed the Delaware."

If he is nominated by the petitions, he will have until Feb. 20 to accept or withdraw.

The counties in which Musmanno said petitions were obtained were Allegheny, Beaver, Berks, Blair, Butler, Cambria, Chester, Clearfield, Erie, Fayette, Indiana, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lawrence, Lebanon, Luzerne, Mercer, Montgomery, Northampton, Schuylkill, Susquehanna, Washington, Westmore, Lycoming and Philadelphia.

Pot ignored, detective says

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP)—The captain of city detectives says approximately 30 per cent of the students at a Lancaster County college have smoked marijuana.

Capt. J. David Smith said Monday he based his figures on information given him by a student.

"There's more marijuana being used than school administrators are aware of or want to believe," said Smith at a meeting of the Brotherhood of Deaf Israel Synagogue.

Smith declined to name the school. There are three colleges in the county, Franklin & Marshall with 1,600 students, Millersville with 2,200, and Elizabethtown with 1,400.

Smith said he feels marijuana is brought to the campus by students returning from holidays. He said he doubts if there are any professional marijuana or narcotic sellers here.

Socialist predicts violence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Socialist Workers Party candidate for vice president predicted Tuesday a "very violent" social upheaval in the United States.

The candidate, Paul Boutelle, 34, also charged there were "concentration camps for black people" in California, Arizona, Louisiana, New Mexico and New Jersey, although he would not give specific locations.

Boutelle, a Negro cab driver, said at a news conference "violence is as American as cherry pie." Boutelle lives in Newark, N.J., but drives his cab in New York's Harlem.

He said, "The disturbances will become more widespread in time. There will be more reprisals against not only the black peoples movement, but against the antiwar movement. The ruling class will use increasingly harsher methods against those trying to renovate conditions."

Regarding the "concentration camps," he said it was possible to round up 20,000 persons in 48 hours and put them into the camps without court procedures. He said this was already being done.

Boutelle said his party does not necessarily advocate violence.

A brother-in-law, Stuart Race of Bangor, Pa. asked police to check the house, saying he hadn't heard from the Stengles for a week and both had been ill.

Firm charges Blue Cross, hospitals in collusion

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Travelers Insurance Co. accused Blue Cross of Western Pennsylvania Tuesday of driving up hospital rates through "unreasonable restraint of competition."

Travelers sued for a court order stopping the "monopolistic practices."

As described in the Hartford, Conn., firm's federal court suit, the disputed practices work like this:

Blue Cross, a nonprofit association, negotiates with hospitals to get a certain discount for subscribers. The discount obtained by Blue Cross is made up by other hospital patients who have no insurance or are insured by other firms.

"Hospital users, other than Blue Cross subscribers, must pay disproportionately and unfairly inflated prices," said the suit.

The suit also charged that Blue Cross' position as a nonprofit organization providing coverage by contract with hospitals gives the association tax advantages not shared by other firms.

Finally, Blue Cross is so big in the 29 western Pennsylvania counties it covers that it can force hospitals to accept its terms without bargaining with the institutions individually, said the suit.

One Travelers official explained it was because Blue Cross is so big in western Pennsylvania that Pittsburgh was chosen as the first test of the association's practices.

John F. Troy, assistant secretary for Travelers' group department, said Blue Cross' policies in Pittsburgh are no different than those in other areas of the country.

Blue Cross claims 2,500,000 subscribers in Pennsylvania's western half, or about 47 per cent of the area's residents.

A Blue Cross spokesman said he didn't know how much of the market his association controls. But he said about 80 per cent of the nation's population is covered by medical insurance.

Blue Cross said it would have no comment on the suit immediately. The association has 20 days to file a reply.

The suit asked for no monetary damages.

Shafer advances budget date

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Shafer advanced the date of presentation of his 1968-69 budget to the General Assembly by a month Tuesday.

The new plan calls for the budget, expected to approximate $2 billion, to be submitted the first or second week of February rather than the first week of March as originally scheduled.

"Because of the legislative leadership's expressed desire to receive the budget early, the governor has instructed the Budget Office to see that this is done," Jack Conmy, Shafer's public relations secretary.

Analysts for Budget Secretary Arthur F. Sampson are in the midst of their review of departmental spending requests for the new fiscal year which begins July 1.

The decision to advance the budget presentation was made after Shafer had conferred with Senate President Pro Tempore Robert D. Fleming, R-Allegheny; House Speaker Kenneth B. Lee, R-Sullivan; and the two floor leaders, Sen. Stanley G. Stroup, R-Bedford, and Rep. Lee A. Donaldson Jr., R-Allegheny.

The leadership praised the decision.

"It will present us with an excellent opportunity to at least begin our review of the budget during the recess," commented Donaldson.

The legislature is in recess until March 4 to permit the Constitutional Convention to have the uninterrupted use of space in the Capitol.

Lee said both chambers would be brought back only the one

Boat carrying Red supplies frustrated

HONG KONG (AP) — The U.S. pacifist sailing yacht Phoenix, frustrated in its bid to turn over more than $7,000 worth of medical equipment first to the North Vietnamese government and then to the South Vietnamese, left Hong Kong today with Hanoi's permission to go to the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

The surgical supplies aboard the Phoenix will be handed over to the North Vietnamese Red Cross for distribution to the North Vietnamese and to the Viet Cong, said a spokesman for the "Quaker Action Group" which is sponsoring the voyage.

Lawrence Scott, executive secretary of the group, told a news conference that the delivery of medical supplies is being carried out as a protest to the war as much as it is a project simply to deliver medical aid to the people of Vietnam.

The Phoenix first arrived here in September hoping to go to Haiphong but the North Vietnamese refused the vessel entry because of the intensive U.S. bombing. The Phoenix then went to South Vietnam but she was refused permission to land the medicine.

Among the crew members of the Phoenix are a 24-year-old registered nurse, Maryann McNaughton, from London Grove, Pa., and Walter Sims, a 37-year-old executive director of the U.S. National Fair Housing Association.

"Working with the freedom movement in the United States, I see ever more clearly the parallel between the oppressed in the United States and those poor and oppressed victims of war in Vietnam," Sims said.

Other members of the Phoenix crew include Scott; Robert Eaton the 23-year-old captain of the vessel; of Philadelphia; Beryl Nelson, 23, of Kokomo, Ind.; and John Braxton, 19, of North Wales, Pa.

Murderer found guilty once again

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Dauphin County Court jury Tuesday convicted Rance Lee Via of a 1966 burglary. Via previously was sentenced to life imprisonment in the April 7, 1967, shooting of a Lancaster County police chief.

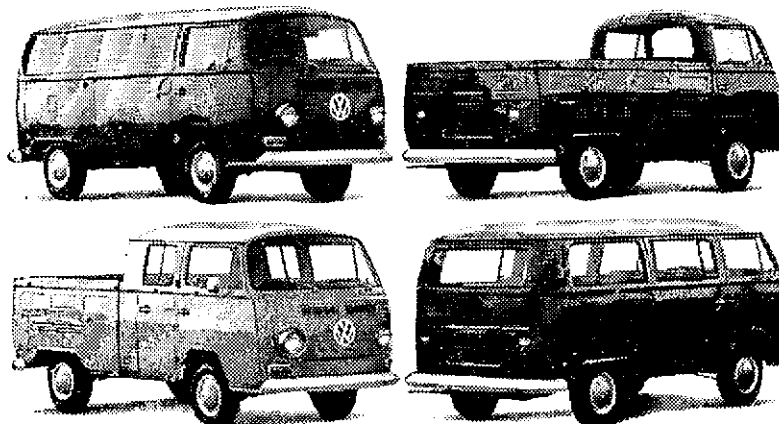

Judge Carl B. Shelley deferred sentencing on the Middletown native, Cash, amounting to $300, jewelry and a radio were taken from the residence of David Cohen, a Harrisburg realtor, in the June 15, 1966 burglary.

Via, 21, was convicted in Lancaster County Court of murder in the shooting of Maytown Police Chief Marvin E. Foltz during an aborted bank holdup.

However, it usually doesn't take too long before our competitors catch on.

But before anyone gets too carried away trying to copy our exclusive new features, we still have some exclusive old features worth duplicating.

Like pickup trucks with tailgates on all three sides. And the economical Volkswagen engine.

However, it usually doesn't take too long before our competitors catch on.

So if you don't want to buy a Volkswagen truck, wait a few years.

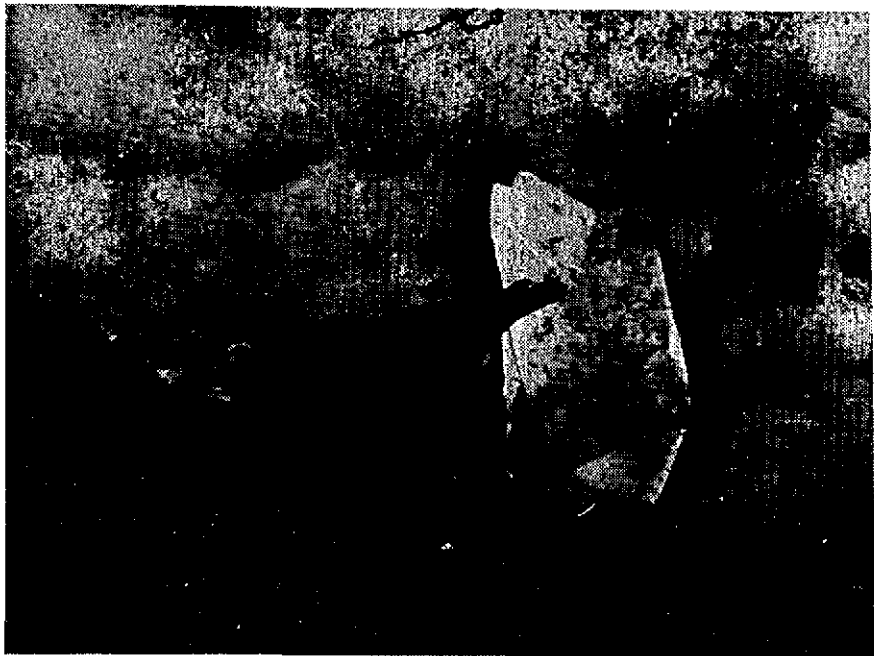

And maybe they can sell you one just like it.

Rights experts confuse Vietnam

In the impasse over the two major U.S. problems of the era it is surprising the number of pseudo experts to whom we give time and space.

The two problems are equal rights and our position in Vietnam. Somehow in the logical discussions of what ails us, the two have become entwined. Spokesmen in one assume a role in another.

Clergymen were understandably eager to assist in the advancement of equal rights on the grounds that the issue was moral. Many have switched to Vietnam and taken their moral issue with them.

College teachers have rushed to become "involved" in marches that began for voting rights in the South but have switched to peace marches in the North.

The biggest jump of all has come from Negroes themselves who reasonably were active in equal rights and have somewhat unreasonably become spokesmen to be quoted on what should be done in Southeast Asia.

King takes Vietnam stand

Among the early switchers was Dr. Martin Luther King who has the double credentials of being a clergyman and a Negro. He seemed to have the sympathy of a majority of the nation when he patiently, unselfishly and courageously worked for Negro rights. He was a rallying symbol of peaceful transition. It was difficult to disagree with his non-violent approach. Even many of those who disagreed with what he was trying to do, admired his sincere approach.

Then Dr. King felt required as a "public figure" to assume a role in the opposition to U.S. participation in Vietnam. It is probably fair to say that this stand was not as popular as the one he held in civil rights. It was generally negative rather than positive. Most important, it cost him stature in a field where he was needed and was best qualified.

Dick Gregory, a comedian by profession, was another to whom much of the nation listened in his role as a Negro concerned with equal rights but whom most of the nation seems to resent as a spokesman on Vietnam.

Then along comes Eartha Kitt, a singer with a background of Negro poverty who understands all about equal rights, Vietnam and violence in the cities. She has the expert answer: it all comes down to war in Vietnam. Youth are rebelling, says Miss Kitt, because they are being "snatched off to be shot in Vietnam."

Of course there's some truth in that. There's also some truth in this statement: "students are going to college and enrolling in graduate schools to escape or postpone military service."

Not the whole truth

But if the war in Vietnam were to end, we doubt that the bottom would drop out of the college market and graduate schools disintegrate. And we doubt that if the war should end next month that Negroes in general and ghetto youths in particular would suddenly feel that their troubles were over and go back to living timidly in squalor.

It is obvious that the Vietnam war, ghetto riots and equal rights are connected by the simple fact that they are presently dividing the talents and resources of the U.S. However, we don't think it helps to confuse the issues by laying one on top of the other and trying to hold them up to the light to read between the lines.

Dr. King, Gregory, Miss Kitt, and even Stokely Carmichael, may be knowledgeable spokesmen on equal rights but they take advantage of their stature and weaken their position when they branch out.

The war is our biggest and most expensive problem but when it ends the others will remain and, like it or not, they must accept limited attention while the nation tries to concentrate on a Vietnam decision.

Much to their relief, she smiled understandingly and said, "Girls, you missed a test this morning. Please take seats apart from one another and get out your notebooks."

When the girls were settled and waiting expectantly, she continued, "Write the answer to this question: 'Which tire on your car was flat?'"

Teenager on the Phone:

I would love to go but I feel I must stay home and help my father with my homework.

A 15-year-old student in a Madison, Wis., high school was suspended for wearing a mustache. Long hair OK, short hair no OK.

Crime message linked to rights

Paul Scott

WASHINGTON — President Johnson's decision to leave the problem of race riots to local law enforcement officials has presented a strong new weapon to Senate opponents of one of his major civil rights proposals.

They are now using the President's anti-discrimination legislation intended to protect individuals in the exercise of a wide variety of civil rights.

Headed by Senator James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, these opponents are attacking the Administration's measure in the Senate, where it is now being debated. The group is circulating a memorandum charging, "The provisions of this (civil rights) bill could be used to harass and deter local law enforcement officers."

The Eastland group memo calls attention to the President's declaration in his State-of-the-Union address, "Those who preach disorder and those who preach violence must know that local authorities are able to resist them swiftly, to resist them sternly, and to resist them decisively." Then it warns:

"It is manifestly unfair to put these local officials in the front line of the struggle to maintain a society of law and order while placing them under the terrible omnipresent threat of being hauled into federal court on a criminal charge because the attorney general determines they had used an unreasonable amount of force in suppressing a riot."

THE SAFEGUARDS — To rule out this "threat," the Eastland group will attempt to add to the administration's civil rights proposal an amendment written into a similar bill on the House floor. It provides:

"... nothing within this section shall be construed so as to deter any law enforcement officer from lawfully carrying out the lawful duties of his office and no such officer shall be considered to be in violation of this section for carrying out the lawful duties of his office or enforcing lawful ordinances and laws of the U.S. or their political subdivisions."

In addition to this protection for local law enforcement officers, the Eastland group will try to add to the Senate bill another House-passed amendment, designed to make sure the bill isn't used to protect agitators such as H. Rap Brown and Stokely Carmichael, the Black Power militants.

This amendment, which obtained overwhelming Republican support in the House, states:

"As used in this section, the term 'engaged in speech or peaceful assembly' shall not mean the urging, instigating or inciting of other persons to riot or to commit any act of violence in furtherance of a riot."

Both of these House-approved amendments were defeated by narrow margins in the Senate Judiciary Committee, which cleared the controversial civil rights measure by a cliff-hanging eight to seven vote.

SPELL IT OUT — In mounting their campaign the Eastland group will attempt to label the administration's civil rights proposal publicly as "a protection measure for agitators like Brown and Carmichael."

This attack plan is clearly indicated in the minority report prepared by Senators Eastland and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., which charges: "This bill will give added protection to roving fomenters of violence, such as Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown."

"Under its terms and provisions, if a person had been present during the inflammatory speech of H. Rap Brown which led to the Cambridge, Md., riots on July 24, 1967, and, becoming enraged at the inflammatory statements made by Brown, had shouted a threat to him from the audience, that person could be tried under this act and fined up to $1,000 and imprisoned for one year."

"If such person had jumped up on the platform and struck Brown, giving him a bloody nose, he could be punished by 10 years in prison and fined up to $10,000. No punishment could be imposed on H. Rap Brown under these circumstances."

The Eastland group is also planning to offer the House-passed anti-riot bill as an amendment to the civil rights measure. Senators Edward Kennedy, R-Mass., and Philip Hart, D-Mich., co-authors of the administration's bill, blocked a similar effort in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Since the House by a 347 to 70 vote passed the anti-riot bill last July, Senators Kennedy and Hart have also succeeded in keeping the Judiciary committee from reporting it out as a separate bill.

Unless it is set aside for other legislation, Senate debate on the civil rights proposal could tie up that body until next spring. Since liberal supporters are planning to try to attach an open housing amendment to the bill, both supporters and opponents are threatening to "debate the measure for months."

Union's mis-state

WASHINGTON — Well, now, we've had the State of the Union message, delivered by President Lyndon B. Johnson, and we've had the rebuttal to it, presented by Sen. Everett Dirksen, (R., Ill.) and Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R., Mich.).

It would seem that everyone has given his opinion of the state of the Union except the man most concerned, the average American man-in-the-street. Fortunately, I was able to find this gentleman — in the street, prone, just as the muggers had left him.

"Tell me, my good man, what is your opinion of the state of the Union? All America is waiting for your answer."

"We need more police, I'll tell you that."

"Of course, but what else? Everyone knows we need more police. That goes without saying."

"If it goes without saying, how come I was yelling, 'police' a few minutes ago and couldn't get one? Say, would you mind calling an ambulance? My head hurts."

"Sorry, I don't want to get involved. But let's have your views on Vietnam. Should our boys be sent over there?"

"Why not? I sent my own son to Vietnam just because it was safer for him than walking around downtown where he'd get hit over the head, robbed, or sold LSD or something. I'd go myself if I could get in."

"O.K. What about the American dollar? How do you feel about that? Should we move to protect it?"

"How you going to protect it? All the crooks have guns and an honest citizen needs a license — which he can't get — to carry one. This last bunch even took my credit cards."

"Another subject. Do increasing prices bother you? Are you afraid of 'runaway inflation'?"

"I just wish they'd increase the price of bullets. Then maybe there wouldn't be so many holdup men."

"Tell me, as the man-in-the-street, what provisions you have made for the next long, hot summer and the riots."

"I'm going to get out of the street. Maybe I'll hide in my bomb shelter in the basement."

"Ah! You have a bomb shelter! Do you think atomic war is near?"

"Gee, I hope so. It couldn't be as bad as this. The H-bomb only hits you once. This is the third time this week I've been robbed."

If LBJ is smart he'll stop giving the average man projections, and start giving him protection.

TRITEMS

With everything else they have on their minds this is the time of year Washington officials must start worrying about when the cherry blossoms will come out.

You know, if George Washington could have foreseen our long, hot summers, he might not have spent that long, cold winter at Valley Forge.

If LBJ really wanted to raise money he'd stop thinking about charging people money to leave the country and start charging them money to get in.

Should economic conditions get much worse in France, Gen. Charles de Gaulles biggest export may be Frenchmen.

In only three years Bobby Kennedy will be running for Senate again in New York — unless, of course, he chooses some other state.

Roscoe Drummond

LBJ's race strategy

WASHINGTON — President Johnson's State of the Union message proved to be remarkably free from the usual election-year politeness.

Johnson shunned a rosy-hued presentation of what the United States is up against at home and abroad.

He was candid, even blunt, in setting out the harsh realities of 1968 and in painting quite forthrightly a picture of the nation in the midst of one of the most painful and, potentially, one of the most rewarding testing periods of its history.

It is nothing less than that. Naturally LBJ warned to the things that are going well — or fairly well — but he didn't ignore or gloss over the things which afflict the whole nation and which cause nearly everyone deep anxiety.

For a President who is off and running for his second term, this may seem an unorthodox turn from the kind of political message which many expected. It is not traditional election-year pap and politics, but it may well be the best kind of politics — a more sober, blunt-speaking President saying what has to be said whatever the consequences.

Absent from the message was the campaign oratory of "you never had it so good."

Gone were the misconceived forensics of the recent AFL-CIO speech and the ill-timed talk about the Republican party's "wooden soldiers." That was a mistake apparently quickly learned.

From everything LBJ said to Congress and the country, it is evident that he may have decided that, just as he has no comfortable choices in Vietnam and no easy choices between guns and butter at home, there is only one way he can run for President in the year 1968.

That way is to continue to make a resolute, sober appeal to the American people that the whole nation will be best served by defeating the aggression in Vietnam and by doing all that is possible — but less than many might wish — to deal with the pressing social problems at home.

The President did not say it quite as frankly as he could, but the message leaves no doubt that he is proceeding on the premise that winning in Vietnam must be the nation's overriding priority and that only afterward will the government have the resources to do what it wants to do to end hard-core unemployment, decisively reduce poverty, and repair urban decay.

No major changes

Johnson is proposing no major or dramatic new Great Society programs. He is centering nearly everything on providing the training and the jobs for those who have long been unemployed, on getting more low-cost housing, and on making sure that the children of parents of medium and low income can get a college education — without which they, too, wouldn't be ready for the better jobs open to them.

But the President is already requesting more than Congress will approve, and there will undoubtedly be a cut-back of his proposed budget if the tax increase is to have any chance of passing.

This means that, as he never fully satisfies either the doves or the hawks in his conduct of a limited war for limited objectives in Vietnam, he will be getting criticized from both sides on the budget — from the hard economists like Democrat Wilbur Mills and Republican House Leader Gerald Ford and from the big spenders like Senator Joseph Clark.

But this is almost certainly exactly where the President wants to be and believes it is best for him to be — occupying the middle ground in Vietnam between the hawks and the doves and at home somewhere between the biggest economizers and the biggest spenders.

Jim Bishop

ladies to determine the type of merchandise they desired to wear — the stuff would move off the racks.

That worked too. The economists told the government not to force the plant owners to build a government - approved tractor, but to let the enterprising managers devise their own — so that the farmers would have a choice of model, size, output and cost.

All of which, including interest charges, is old hat to Americans but very new chapeau to a Russian. It is possible that Russian children may be taught that, in 1963, the Soviet Union invented private enterprise.

The swing from sharp left toward political center continues on Liberman's impetus until now, almost one-third of all industry except Soviet Defense is privately managed and profit sharing. In 1959, the Soviet government spawned Communist China as the newest and biggest of the satellites around Mother Russia. China did not believe in interest rates or private enterprise. A decade later, the baby began to denounce its political mother as "revisionist," a violator of the precepts of Karl Marx. Politically, the Soviet Union began to tilt toward the U.S.A. while calling us names.

Swing right

New Premier Kosygin and Party Secretary Brezhnev find themselves loosening the ties to Poland, Rumania and Hungary, and permitting merchants and plant managers more latitude, more equitable wage scales, and fiscal bonuses to employees. Russia is not a capitalistic nation; far from it. But it is about as far to the right of China as it is to the left of America.

The word for this is "awkward." Sooner or later, there must be an acute confrontation between the U.S. and China, and the Soviet Union cannot stand by as "neutralist" and still pretend to maintain political leadership of its bloc of socialist states. It must pick a side. Either way is anathema. If it chooses China, Russia becomes a satellite in an Oriental world; if it selects the U.S., it fights for the preservation of a capitalistic world.

So far as I know, professor Evsei Liberman is still in Kharkov. All he suggested was that if you lend a hundred rubles for five years, and get back one hundred rubles, you have lost money. A very astute observation...

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Flu is super cold

The blood count is rather important because in Influenza the white blood cells tend to be lower than with the common cold.

The science of epidemiology is a very complicated one. These research scientists can predict with remarkable degree of accuracy the time and the severity of an epidemic. These epidemiologists immediately notify public health officials all over the world and alert them to the need to vaccinate people, especially the elderly and the infirm, against the Asian Flu.

The Flu vaccine is remarkably effective in reducing the severity of influenza attacks. It most certainly should be taken by all those patients who are directed to do so by their own physician.

The treatment for Asian Flu and the common cold are essentially the same. Fever is reduced by aspirin. Pains and aches are helped by mild drugs like codeine.

Fluids are increased and diet should be moderately light. The throat can be gargled with simple warm solution containing a half teaspoon of salt in a glass of ordinary tap water.

Nose drops, used in moderation and followed by steam inhalations are beneficial.

The need for antibiotics depends entirely on the judgment of the physician. If he feels that the influenza is complicated he will use some form of antibiotic.

Don't you, the patient, be the judge as to whether "yours" is the cold or the Flu. See your doctor early and give yourself this greater advantage of rapid recovery.

Unless it is set aside for other legislation, Senate debate on the civil rights proposal could tie up that body until next spring. Since liberal supporters are planning to try to attach an open housing amendment to the bill, both supporters and opponents are threatening to "debate the measure for months."

Don MacLean

Union's mis-state

WASHINGTON — Well, now, we've had the State of the Union message, delivered by President Lyndon B. Johnson, and we've had the rebuttal to it, presented by Sen. Everett Dirksen, (R. Ill.) and Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R., Mich.).

It would seem that everyone has given his opinion of the state of the Union except the man most concerned, the average American man-in-the-street. Fortunately, I was able to find this gentleman — in the street, prone, just as the muggers had left him.

"Tell me, my good man, what is your opinion of the state of the Union? All America is waiting for your answer."

"We need more police, I'll tell you that."

"Of course, but what else? Everyone knows we need more police. That goes without saying."

"If it goes without saying, how come I was yelling, 'police' a few minutes ago and couldn't get one? Say, would you mind calling an ambulance? My head hurts."

"Sorry, I don't want to get involved. But let's have your views on Vietnam. Should our boys be sent over there?"

"Why not? I sent my own son to Vietnam just because it was safer for him than walking around downtown where he'd get hit over the head, robbed, or sold LSD or something. I'd go myself if I could get in."

"O.K. What about the American dollar? How do you feel about that? Should we move to protect it?"

"How you going to protect it? All the crooks have guns and an honest citizen needs a license — which he can't get — to carry one. This last bunch even took my credit cards."

"Another subject. Do increasing prices bother you? Are you afraid of 'runaway inflation'?"

"I just wish they'd increase the price of bullets. Then maybe there wouldn't be so many holdup men."

"Tell me, as the man-in-the-street, what provisions you have made for the next long, hot summer and the riots."

"I'm going to get out of the street. Maybe I'll hide in our bomb shelter in the basement."

"Ah! You have a bomb shelter! Do you think atomic war is near?"

"Gee, I hope so. It couldn't be as bad as this. The H-bomb only hits you once. This is the third time this week I've been robbed."

If LBJ is smart he'll stop giving the average man projections, and start giving him protection.

TRITEMS

With everything else they have on their minds this is the time of year Washington officials must start worrying about when the cherry blossoms will come out.

You know, if George Washington could have foreseen our long, hot summers, he might not have spent that long, cold winter at Valley Forge.

If LBJ really wanted to raise money he'd stop thinking about charging people money to leave the country and start charging them money to get in.

Should economic conditions get much worse in France, Gen. Charles de Gaulles biggest export may be Frenchmen.

In only three years Bobby Kennedy will be running for Senate again in New York — unless, of course, he chooses some other state.

Roscoe Drummond

LBJ's race strategy

WASHINGTON — President Johnson's State of the Union message proved to be remarkably free from the usual election-year politics.

Johnson shunned a rosy-hued presentation of what the United States is up against at home and abroad.

He was candid, even blunt, in setting out the harsh realities of 1968 and in painting quite forthrightly a picture of the nation in the midst of one of the most painful and, potentially, one of the most rewarding testing periods of its history.

It is nothing less than that.

Naturally LBJ warmed to the things that are going well — or fairly well — but he didn't ignore or gloss over the things which afflict the whole nation and which cause nearly everyone deep anxiety.

For a President who is off and running for his second term, this may seem an unorthodox turn from the kind of political message which many expected. It is not traditional election-year pap and politics, but it may well be the best kind of politics — a more somber, blunt-speaking President saying what has to be said whatever the consequences. Absent from the message was the campaign oratory of "you never had it so good."

Gone were the misconceived forensics of the recent AFL-CIO speech and the ill-timed talk about the Republican party's "wooden soldiers." That was a mistake apparently quickly learned.

From everything LBJ said to Congress and the country, it is evident that he may have decided that, just as he has no comfortable choices in Vietnam and no easy choices between guns and butter at home, there is only one way he can run for President in the year 1968.

That way is to continue to make a resolute, sober appeal to the American people that the whole nation will be best served by defeating the aggression in Vietnam and by doing all that is possible — but less than many might wish — to deal with the pressing social problems at home.

The President did not say it quite as frankly as he could, but the message leaves no doubt that he is proceeding on the premise that winning in Vietnam must be the nation's overriding priority and that only afterward will the government have the resources to do what it wants to do to end hard-core unemployment, decisively reduce poverty, and repair urban decay.

No major changes

Johnson is proposing no major or dramatic new Great Society programs. He is centering nearly everything on providing the training and the jobs for those who have long been unemployed, on getting more low-cost housing, and on making sure that the children of parents of medium and low income can get a college education — without which they, too, wouldn't be ready for the better jobs open to them.

But the President is already requesting more than Congress will approve, and there will undoubtedly be a cut-back of his proposed budget if the tax increase is to have any chance of passing.

This means that, as he never fully satisfies either the doves or the hawks in his conduct of a limited war for limited objectives in Vietnam, he will be getting criticized from both sides on the budget — from the hard economists like Democrat Wilbur Mills and Republican House Leader Gerald Ford and from the big spenders like Senator Joseph Clark.

But this is almost certainly exactly where the President wants to be and believes it is best for him to be — occupying the middle ground in Vietnam between the hawks and the doves and at home somewhere between the biggest economists and the biggest spenders.

Jim Bishop

Soviet capitalism

There is a little known Soviet economist who may change the world. He is Evsei Liberman and he lives in Kharkov, a city of 950,000 population situated about 400 miles southwest of Moscow. Professor Liberman suggested that the Soviet government charge interest on capital investments.

This is Communist heresy. It is socialistic sacrilege. It is the bloody imprimatur of the capitalist exploiters. Liberman did not intend to undermine communism, or to alter its course. The professor is a Russian patriot.

Liberman had witnessed the failure of two five-year plans and one of seven years. Personal observation in the factories and on the farm taught him that the government bookkeeping system was kidding itself. The central government was handing out hundreds of millions of rubles to party bosses in the provinces for the production of tractors, or the growing of corn, and was chalking each one up as a profitable venture if the original investment was returned over a period of years.

The professor's pehcl told him that this represented a loss. He said nothing until after Josef Stalin was safely dead, then he took a long chance and tossed it out as the new economic gospel. The party bosses discussed it gravely, and applauded grimly. Other Soviet economists endorsed the Liberman principle of "Expand or Die" and, unconsciously, the Soviet government began to swing from left toward center.

Many feet waves

It was like dropping a rock into a shotglass of vodka. The waves spilled all over the steppes. Liberman and his disciples found fault with the collective farm system, where the commune work of many farmers produced less product than the three percent the government permitted each farmer to till for his private use.

The department stores had ordered from textile factories so many millions of print dresses each year; so many millions of furtrimmed coats; so many millions of walking shoes. These were not selling in spite of government knowledge that the people needed clothes. Liberman pointed out that there is an old law called, surprisingly, "Supply and Demand." If the government factories would stop manufacturing items selected by party bosses, and permit the ladies to determine the type of merchandise they desired to wear — the stuff would move off the racks.

That worked too. The economists told the government not to force the plant owners to build a government-approved tractor, but to let the enterprising managers devise their own — so that the farmers would have a choice of model, size, output and cost.

All of which, including interest charges, is old hat to Americans but very new chapeau to a Russian. It is possible that Russian children may be taught that, in 1965, the Soviet Union invented private enterprise.

The swing from sharp left toward political center continues on Liberman's impetus until now, almost one-third of all industry except Soviet Defense is privately managed and profit sharing. In 1949, the Soviet government spawned Communist China as the newest and biggest of the satellites around Mother Russia. China did not believe in interest rates or private enterprise. A decade later, the baby began to denounce its political mother as "revisionist," a violator of the precepts of Karl Marx. Politically, the Soviet Union began to tilt toward the U.S.A. while calling us names.

Swing right

Now Premier Kosygin and Party Secretary Brezhnev find themselves loosening the ties to Poland, Rumania and Hungary, and permitting merchants and plant managers more latitude, more equitable wage scales, and fiscal bonuses to employees. Russia is not a capitalistic nation; far from it. But it is about as far to the right of China as it is to the left of America.

The word for this is "awkward." Sooner or later, there must be an acute confrontation between the U.S. and China, and the Soviet Union cannot stand by as "neutralist" and still pretend to maintain political leadership of its bloc of socialist states. It must pick a side. Either way is anathema. If it chooses China, Russia becomes a satellite in an Oriental world; if it selects the U.S., it fights for the preservation of a capitalistic world.

So far as I know, professor Evsei Liberman is still in Kharkov. All he suggested was that if you lend a hundred rubles for five years, and get back one hundred rubles, you have lost money. A very astute observation...

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Flu is super cold

The blood count is rather important because in Influenza the white blood cells tend to be lower than with the common cold.

The science of epidemiology is a very complicated one. These research scientists can predict with remarkable degree of accuracy the time and the severity of an epidemic. These epidemiologists immediately notify public health officials all over the world and alert them to the need to vaccinate people, especially the elderly and the infirm, against the Asian Flu.

The Flu vaccine is remarkably effective in reducing the severity of influenza attacks. It most certainly should be taken by all those patients who are directed to do so by their own physician.

The treatment for Asian Flu and the common cold are essentially the same. Fever is reduced by aspirin. Pains and aches are helped by mild drugs like codeine.

Fluids are increased and diet should be moderately light. The throat can be gargled with simple warm solution containing a half teaspoon of salt in a glass of ordinary tap water.

Nose drops, used in moderation and followed by steam inhalations are beneficial.

The need for antibiotics depends entirely on the judgment of the physician. If he feels that the influenza is complicated he will use some form of antibiotic.

Don't you, the patient, be the judge as to whether "yours" is the cold or the Flu. See your doctor early and give yourself this greater advantage of rapid recovery.

Daughter wants affection

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday my mother criticized me sharply because I always seem to be 'hanging on' my boy friend. She said it looks cheap and I ought to stop it.

I went to my room and thought over what she had said. I decided she was absolutely right. Then I asked myself, why do I do it? The answer seemed clear, because I am starved for affection.

I've always wanted my mother's approval more than anything in the world. She has never shown me that she cares about me in the way most mothers do. The mothers of my friends caress their daughters and kiss them hello and goodbye, but my mother has never done this. Once, when I asked her why she never showed me any affection, she said, "I guess I am not the type."

Please print my letter. My mother never misses your column and it might be a good thing if she saw this.

Dear Circle: Hugging and kissing is not proof of love. It may well be that your mother feels more deeply about you than some mothers who are forever caressing and petting their children.

Some people are virtually incapable of expressing affection. I feel sorry for them because often they are painfully aware of this limitation but they are too inhibited and self-conscious to do anything about it.

Dear Ann Landers: My first marriage was such a miserable failure I felt as if I was not worth the powder to blow me to hell. Two years later, I met a man who wanted to marry me. I was determined that I would be the perfect wife. My husband says he is satisfied with our marriage. Well, he should be satisfied because I have bottled up every emotion that might make him angry or uncomfortable.

Whenever we have a disagreement, I smile and say, "Yes dear, you are right." When I want to do something and he doesn't want me to, I always give in without a word. No matter what — he has his way.

This has been going on for six years and now I am about to explode. My throat has been so tight for six months that I feel as if I have a goiter although the doctor says it is nothing but "Nerves."

Now, I am getting pains in my chest and my heart pounds so fast I have trouble breathing. Is it possible that this is also nerves? What should I do? My husband thinks all psychiatrists are quacks. He will not let me go to one although I have a feeling it's what I need. Can you help me?

SINKING FAST

Dear Sinking: Go to your family doctor and tell him exactly what you have told me. He will surely recommend a specialist and suggest a clinic where you can be treated. Six years of masking hostilities with a smile would drive anyone around the bend. I'm surprised you haven't cracked before now. Get going at once and good luck to you, dear.

Confidential to Want To Tell Her Off: Pass up the inclination. Sampson slew a thousand men with jawbone of an ass. Every day thousands more slay themselves with the same instrument. Don't be among them.

Snake 'live-ins' are new fad

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Snake pit "live-ins" are the latest fad in South Africa.

John Weiman, curator of this Indian Ocean port's snake park, says he established a world mark for human-snake "live-ins." Nearly 10,000 people visited the park to see Weiman share the pit with some 200 reptiles for 72 hours.

He's being challenged by David Field, who says he will live among snakes in a Transvaal Province pit for nine days.

Holt case ruled accident

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Government investigators say they have found no indication that the disappearance of Australia's late prime minister, Harold Holt, was anything but accidental.

Sugar frosted muffins make an interesting addition to breakfast or supper menus.

Home baked breads

To cure breakfast blues

By LINDA PIPHER

Stroudsburg — One of the popular recipes last Fall that I gave you with this column was for a pumpkin bread. I have a new one for you so if you didn't cut out that recipe you can use this one. It makes two loaves so that you can bake and eat one and freeze the other.

As with all quick breads, after you add the flour, mix only until the dry ingredients are moistened and blended; beating cause a heavy bread with holes which home economists call "tunnels."

Breads will slice better the second day and they keep well. Serve plain or with butter or cream cheese.

Pumpkin Bread

- 3 cups white sugar
- 1 cup corn oil
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 2 cups pumpkin
- 3½ cups all purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg, and all spice
- ½ teaspoon cloves

- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2-3 cup water
- ½ cup chopped raisins or dates
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Combine sugar, oil and eggs. Add pumpkin. Add dry ingredients, which have been sifted. Add water, and mix well. Pour into 2 loaf pans, greased, floured, and with waxed paper on the bottoms. Bake 1 hour in a preheated 350 degree oven.

If you have the breakfast blues this time of year, remember that quick breads make a nice change from the usual toast, coffee cake, pancakes or waffles. Apple bread makes a particularly nice breakfast bread.

- Apple Spice Bread
- 2 cups sifted all purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- ½ cup shortening
- ¾ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs

- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup grated raw apples
- 2 tablespoons vinegar plus water to make ½ cup
- ½ cup chopped nuts

Sift flour with soda, salt, and spices. Cream shortening; blend in sugar and add eggs one at a time. Beat until smooth. Add vanilla. Add flour mixture alternately with grated apple and liquid. Stir in nuts. Turn into greased loaf pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 1 hour. Cool several hours before slicing.

In the photo are glazed muffins, also nice for breakfast, but equally good for supper. Extra muffins can be stored in the freezer and will keep well as long as they are air tight.

Sugar Frost Muffins

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 1-3 cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ cup granulated sugar

Grease 12 medium muffin pans. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Add brown sugar and mix well. Cut in shortening until mixture has a fine even crumb. Beat 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk, reserving 1 egg white for topping. Combine beaten egg and milk and add to dry ingredients, stirring only until blended. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full. Beat egg white, add 2 tablespoons water to egg white and brush over top of muffins. Sprinkle each muffin with 1 teaspoon granulated sugar. Bake in a hot preheated 425 degree oven 20 to 25 minutes. Yields 12 muffins.

For a different muffin, use crushed graham crackers instead of flour. To make the crumbs fine, whiz in a blender or crush fine with a rolling pin.

- Graham Muffins
- 18 graham crackers crushed to fine crumbs or 1½ cups crumbs
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1-3 cup melted margarine
- 1 egg, beaten
- ¼ cup light corn sirup
- ½ cup milk
- ½ cup chopped pecans

Put all the ingredients in mixing bowl. Stir to mix well. It will be a thick mixture. Spoon into paper-lined muffin pans. Bake 20 minutes in a preheated 375 degree oven. Yields 12 muffins.

Mother's March tonight in Portland

Portland — Mrs. Lela Randolph, chairman, has announced that the Mother's March will be held on Wednesday night, Jan. 24, at 7 p.m., with Mrs. Alfred Bush as co-chairman.

Workers will be Mrs. Henry Webb, Mrs. William Brod Jr., Mrs. William Brod, Mrs. Carl Beck, Miss Cheryl Kochanski, Miss Mary Jean Beck, Mrs. Walter Davidge, Mrs. Thomas Nangle, Mrs. Fred Honecker, Miss Judy Gardner and Mrs. John Henshelt.

Tired of beef hamburgers? Shape ground lamb into patties and pan fry. For that extra touch, when you season the lamb with salt and pepper, add a little minced fresh dill or dried dill weed.

Ever cook rice in tomato juice instead of water? If you try this, add a bay leaf along with the salt usually used.

VNA meets with new directors

East Stroudsburg — New directors of the Visiting Nurse Assn. of Monroe County were introduced at the meeting of the board of directors on Monday morning at the Motel Inn Towne.

They are: Mrs. Clifford Cramer, Mrs. Lester Abloff, Mrs. Morton Spinner, Mrs. Thomas MacMillan, Henry S. Evans and William Treible.

The resignation of Miss Marion O'Hara as a visiting nurse was accepted and Mrs. Marion Grainger was named to the position.

In the three-month report of visits during the three month period in 1967 numbered 1,538 for the corresponding period last year 1,124. The number of new patients also rose, numbering 59 this year and 22 last year for the same period.

For 1967, October was high with 552 visits, declining to 541 in November and 445 in December.

The board voted to renew its membership in the National League of Nursing.

Atheist vs. Christian in WSCS dialogue

Stroudsburg — The Stroudsburg Methodist WSCS opened the January meeting with a prayer group led by Mrs. William Deivler. Devotions were led by Mrs. Robert Titus.

The program followed with an interesting dialogue between Prof. Thomas Blair of East Stroudsburg State College and Rev. David High. Professor Blair played the part of an atheist for the purpose of the discussion, and Reverend High took the Christian viewpoint.

Home baked breads

To cure breakfast blues

By LINDA PIPHER
Stroudsburg — One of the popular recipes last Fall that I gave you with this column was for a pumpkin bread. I have a new one for you so if you didn't cut out that recipe you can use this one. It makes two loaves so that you can bake and eat one and freeze the other.

As with all quick breads, after you add the flour, mix only until the dry ingredients are moistened and blended; beating cause a heavy bread with holes which home economists call "tunnels."

Breads will slice better the second day and they keep well. Serve plain or with butter or cream cheese.

Pumpkin Bread

- 3 cups white sugar
- 1 cup corn oil
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 2 cups pumpkin
- 3 1/2 cups all purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg, and all spice
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves

- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2-3 cup water
- 1/2 cup chopped raisins or dates
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Combine sugar, oil and eggs. Add pumpkin. Add dry ingredients, which have been sifted. Add water, and mix well. Pour into 2 loaf pans, greased, floured, and with waxed paper on the bottoms. Bake 1 hour in a preheated 350 degree oven.

If you have the breakfast blues this time of year, remember that quick breads make a nice change from the usual toast, coffee cake, pancakes or waffles. Apple bread makes a particularly nice breakfast bread.

Apple Spice Bread

- 2 cups sifted all purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs

- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup grated raw apples
- 2 tablespoons vinegar plus water to make 1/2 cup
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Sift flour with soda, salt, and spices. Cream shortening; blend in sugar and add eggs one at a time. Beat until smooth. Add vanilla. Add flour mixture alternately with grated apple and liquid. Stir in nuts. Turn into greased loaf pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 1 hour. Cool several hours before slicing.

In the photo are glazed muffins, also nice for breakfast, but equally good for supper. Extra muffins can be stored in the freezer and will keep well as long as they are air tight.

Sugar Frost Muffins

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/3 cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar

Grease 12 medium muffin pans. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Add brown sugar and mix well. Cut in shortening until mixture has a fine even crumb. Beat 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk, reserving 1 egg white for topping. Combine beaten egg and milk and add to dry ingredients, stirring only until blended. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full. Beat egg white, add 2 tablespoons water to egg white and brush over top of muffins. Sprinkle each muffin with 1 teaspoon granulated sugar. Bake in a hot preheated 425 degree oven 20 to 25 minutes. Yields 12 muffins.

For a different muffin, use crushed graham crackers instead of flour. To make the crumbs fine, whiz in a blender or crush fine with a rolling pin.

Graham Muffins

- 18 graham crackers crushed to fine crumbs or 1 1/2 cups crumbs
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1-3 cup melted margarine
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1/4 cup light corn sirup
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Put all the ingredients in mixing bowl. Stir to mix well. It will be a thick mixture. Spoon into paper-lined muffin pans. Bake 20 minutes in a preheated 375 degree oven. Yields 12 muffins.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

There doesn't seem to be much enthusiasm over the prospect of more snow. Especially from people who have just now chipped the last of the ice from their sidewalks.

The ancient calendar makers who made February the shortest month of the year didn't make out too well, either. The bad weather just slops over into March.

One advantage to January this year is that it has five of the most popular meeting days, Monday and Tuesday, and you'll notice we're filling them up with special events.

Phillipsburg man released from jail

STROUDSBURG — Michael Richard Schmidt, 25, of 358 Heckman St., Phillipsburg, N. J., Friday pleaded guilty of a disorderly conduct charge before Stroudsburg Justice of the Peace Floyd W. Kellogg.

Schmidt was released after paying a fine and costs.

Two other charges against the New Jersey man were dropped. A charge of assault and battery by Mrs. Gladys Slack of 512 Scott St., Stroudsburg, and a charge of resisting arrest by Stroudsburg Borough Police, were withdrawn at the hearing.

Schmidt, last Sunday, entered the home of Mrs. Slack, twisted her arm, pulled her hair, and forced her out on the front porch of her home.

Dorothy Barrier, extension clothing specialist, says, "Cutting fur-like fabrics presents problems but by laying the patterns on the back rather than on the pile side it's easier to pin the pattern firmly." She feels, "If the pile is thick, cut just one thickness at a time. Pile may be easier to control if you cut with a razor rather than scissors." Sewing rent or fake fur is a little out of my line. Actually the last time I had a needle in my hand was 15 years ago. That was when I reached into the sifter's sewing basket to borrow her bottle opener.

DEAR DON:

There is no question that many men choose to look their worst in public. I also agree that what we do over a sustained length of time can easily become a habit. A man I know attended art school in Los Angeles. In this particular session, the new, nude model had disrobed for her first sitting. She sat for an hour or so and everything seemed very natural. After members of the class had filed out of the room, descended the staircase, and left the building, the model departed, too.

There was only one thing startling about this. It wasn't until she reached the street that she realized her clothes were still upstairs in the classroom. Habit is not easy to deal with. Even the model needed closer watching.

Options may highlight future forms of government in Monroe County

By GIL MURRAY
Record News Editor
STROUDSBURG — Governments in Monroe County could remain basically the same after constitutional revision, or they could change drastically.

The conventions subcommittees on local government have come up with revisions which would provide optional forms of government for counties, boroughs and townships.

The subcommittee on county government favors allowing counties to have the option of adopting a home rule charter or several other options which would be spelled out by the General Assembly.

The Rev. John N. Roberts, a delegate from Mountainhome, is a member of the county government subcommittee.

A home rule subcommittee has also submitted proposals providing for optional forms of government for cities, boroughs and townships with populations of more than 15,000.

Late last week, the full committee on Local Government indicated it favored a proposal to allow local governments the right to adopt a home rule charter, but limit "residual power" only to counties.

While there are several problems still to be ironed out, it seems apparent the full committee will submit to the floor a package which will call for the elimination of the county offices of coroner, auditor and surveyor.

Eliminate fees
Also gaining widespread support from the full committee is a proposed revision which would place all county officeholders on a yearly salary and eliminate the existing fee system.

The inequities of the fee system have been highlighted in Monroe by the high earnings of the county's register and recorder, treasurer and prothonotary.

The key provision of the subcommittee's report is a proposal which would allow all of the state's counties to adopt a home rule charter such as now is in effect in Philadelphia.

If a home rule charter were adopted, county government within that county, unless a city, borough or township with more than 15,000 people decided to adopt its own charter.

To enact such a change it would be necessary to place the proposal on the ballot in the form of referendum. Such a move could be brought about by local initiative, or by action of the county commissioners or General Assembly.

Status quo
The forms of local options will be left to the General Assembly, with the exception of what could be called the status quo, which is spelled out in the subcommittee's report.

This would be a county government calling for the election of three commissioners, a controller, district attorney, treasurer, sheriff, register of wills, recorder of deeds, prothonotary and clerk of courts.

It is this provision of the proposal which eliminates coroners, auditors and surveyors by simply not naming these offices as part of the governmental structure.

The proposal also makes it easier for counties to join into intergovernmental projects with counties in Pennsylvania or in neighboring states.

The revision would make it easier to create such an agency as the Tucks Island Regional Advisory Council.

Another proposal which is expected to be part of the Local Government package presented to the floor would require reapportionment on the local level from time to time.

This would mean towns and boroughs, such as Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg, would have to apportion their wards after the U.S. Supreme Court's
"one-man, one-vote" principle.

Other key provisions of the report would:

— Allow county treasurers to succeed themselves.

— Require that all fees collected by officeholders be paid to either the county or state as provided by law.

— Prevent counties from interfering with a municipality's right to provide its own police and fire protection.

Among the optional forms of government which the General Assembly could be expected to establish would be the elimination of county row offices and the creation of an executive-type government.

Options may highlight future forms of government in Monroe County

By GIL MURRAY
Record News Editor
STROUDSBURG — Governments in Monroe County could remain basically the same after constitutional revision, or they could change drastically.

The conventions subcommittees on local government have come up with revisions which would provide optional forms of government for counties, boroughs and townships.

The subcommittee on county government favors allowing counties to have the option of adopting a home rule charter or several other options which would be spelled out by the General Assembly.

The Rev. John N. Roberts, a delegate from Mountainhome, is a member of the county government subcommittee.

A home rule subcommittee has also submitted proposals providing for optional forms of government for cities, boroughs and townships with populations of more than 15,000.

Late last week, the full committee on Local Government indicated it favored a proposal to allow local governments the right to adopt a home rule charter, but limit "residual power" only to counties.

While there are several problems still to be ironed out, it seems apparent the full committee will submit to the floor a package which will call for the elimination of the county offices of coroner, auditor and surveyor.

Eliminate fees

Also gaining widespread support from the full committee is a proposed revision which would place all county office-holders on a yearly salary and eliminate the existing fee system.

The inequities of the fee system have been highlighted in Monroe by the high earnings of the county's register and recorder, treasurer and prothonotary.

The key provision of the subcommittee's report is a proposal which would allow all of the state's counties to adopt a home rule charter such as now is in effect in Philadelphia.

If a home rule charter were adopted, county government would be the only government within that county, unless a city, borough or township with more than 15,000 people decided to adopt its own charter.

To enact such a change it would be necessary to place the proposal on the ballot in the form of referendum. Such a move could be brought about by local initiative, or by action of the county commissioners or General Assembly.

Status quo

The forms of local options will be left to the General Assembly, with the exception of what could be called the status quo, which is spelled out in the subcommittee's report.

This would be a county government calling for the election of three commissioners, controller, district attorney, treasurer, sheriff, register of wills, recorder of deeds, prothonotary and clerk of courts.

It is this provision of the proposal which eliminates coroners, auditors and surveyors by simply not naming these offices as part of the governmental structure.

The proposal also makes it easier for counties to join into intergovernmental projects with counties in Pennsylvania or in neighboring states.

The revision would make it easier to create such an agency as the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council.

Another proposal which is expected to be part of the Local Government package presented to the floor would require reapportionment on the local level from time to time.

This would mean towns and boroughs, such as Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg, would have to apportion their wards after the U.S. Supreme Court's "one-man, one-vote" principle.

Other key provisions of the report would:

- Allow county treasurers to succeed themselves.
- Require that all fees collected by officeholders be paid to either the county or state as provided by law.
- Prevent counties from interfering with a municipality's right to provide its own police and fire protection.

Among the optional forms of government which the General Assembly could be expected to establish would be the elimination of county row offices and the creation of an executive-type government.

Annexing order may be lengthy

STROUDSBURG — Attorney Harry Lee, Delaware Water Gap Borough Solicitor, said "Tuesday an answer to a 'show cause' order filed Jan. 3 regarding the annexation by the borough of the proposed Howard Johnson site, in Smithfield Township, could be expected during the first week in February.

The show cause order was filed by Attorney Samuel Newman, Smithfield Township solicitor.

Smithfield is protesting the annexation of the tract and according to Lee the case could be "tied up" for as long as six months.

Following Lee's answer to the order, briefs will be prepared by both he and Newman for an argument before Judge Arlington W. Williams.

East Stroudsburg officials study school bus problems

EAST STROUDSBURG — Officials of the East Stroudsburg Area School District met with a group of parents Tuesday in an attempt to resolve problems involving bus transportation. Several parents complained during a school board meeting Monday night that the pick up times on one route were erratic and a group of high school students were forced to stand outside for an hour waiting for a bus.

Mrs. Pauline Peterson, district superintendent, reported that a bus which comes down Coolbaugh Rd. into Marshalls Creek will not start its run until 7:15 a.m.

The parents along the route had complained that the bus started its pick up earlier on several occasions and at other times was late.

T.B. Courtright told the parents that the route was recently taken over by a new driver.

Mrs. Peterson said that the second problem of high school students waiting at the general store in Marshalls Creek for a bus to travel to and from the Middle Smithfield School will take longer to correct.

She did say, however, that the wait is one half hour and that with the overload on other buses in the area it is not possible at this time to move the students to another bus.

She said that in the past the general store was opened and the students could wait inside, but recently the store has not opened while the students are waiting.

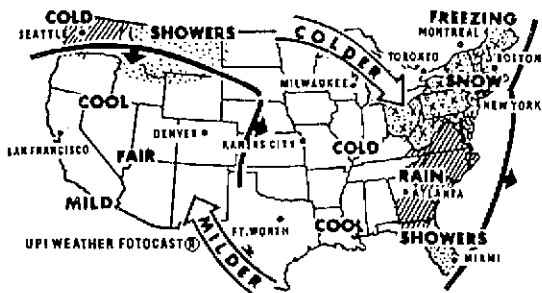

The district superintendent said that the administration has already started work on a plan to completely re-route the buses for next year.

She said an attempt will be made to have space available on all bus routes.

Mrs. Peterson also said her staff is investigating the possibility of separating the secondary and elementary runs.

This approach, she said would cost the school board additional money.

GREENTOWN — The Hemlock Grove official board will meet at 8 p.m. on Friday at the church.

'Y' drive goes over $2,000

STROUDSBURG — The 1968 Monroe County YMCA Sustaining and Century Club Fund Campaign has passed the $2,000 mark, Robert L. Clark, chairman of the drive, said Tuesday night.

Meeting with Division leaders, Clark said, "The general public has shown with their contributions that the YMCA has a definite role in the future of the Pocono Mountains."

He went on to say, "During the next three weeks the board of directors of the YMCA will be making their reports on the sustaining and Century Club campaign. I am optimistic that their efforts will surpass previous marks."

He noted that YMCA Sunday was observed in area churches. "The churches of the communities are cooperating with us in this endeavor. Like all interested laymen they see the 'Y' as the beacon in Monroe County today and tomorrow."

Sessions scheduled
Clark has scheduled sessions with Division leaders later in the month, before kicking off the second phase of the YMCA Fund Campaign.

"The ground work is being laid in the sustaining and Century Club drive. However, the backbone of the YMCA and what it stands for lies in the actual membership campaign which will be held throughout the month of February," he pointed out.

"When we get this physical and spiritual plant bulging with youngsters and teenagers via actual memberships, then we know we have the ingredients for a better society in the Pocono Mountains," he said.

Plans call for three dinner sessions during February, the first on Feb. 15, followed by meetings on Feb. 22 and 28.

Campaign reports will be given at all of the sessions stated for the YMCA in Stroudsburg.

EAST STROUDSBURG — Funeral services for Charles V. Overfield, 81, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 1, were held Tuesday at 3 p.m. here in the Lantierman Funeral Home with Rev. David Kleinstuber officiating.

Palbearers were William Perry, Luther Van Why, George Overfield, Roy Frutchey, Woodrow Heller and John Howey.

C.D. gathering

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Civil Defense office in East Stroudsburg will conduct a reorganization meeting Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. at the Boro building in the council chambers.

Musical instrument talks hit sour note before board

EAST STROUDSBURG — The director of the East Stroudsburg Area band department Monday night strongly defended a firm which has been supplying the school district musical instruments and repair service.

During a school board meeting in the junior-senior high school, Robert Zellner refused a claim that a Stroudsburg music store could provide the same service.

Jay Cameron, owner of the Mainline Music Store, asked to be given equal consideration with Charles and Mary Wilkes-Barre.

Cameron claimed that his location would enable him to provide better service to band members who bought instruments in his store.

Musical tests
At East Stroudsburg, which has one of the best band programs in the state, young students are given musical aptitude tests to determine their potential for playing a musical instrument.

If a student shows potential ability, his parents are sent a letter explaining the school's program.

Zellner claimed that while the letter mentions the Wilkes-Barre firm, it is also made clear that parents can buy instruments from anyone they wish.

Zellner said that Cameron's approach to the situation was "all wrong." He indicated that the matter should have been pursued with the school administration and not brought before the school board.

Cameron maintained that he was forced to go before the school board because school administrators are unwilling to make changes.

Obituaries

Former area resident dies at 80

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Dr. E. Harold Mohn, a summer resident of the area for many years, died last Friday in the Palo Alto Hospital in California after a brief illness.

Dr. Mohn was superintendent of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Church when he bought Melmorest above the village 35 years ago and he and his family have summered here since that time.

At the time of his death, Dr. Mohn was executive director of and Cultivation of the Methodist Church.

He has often preached at local churches and has many friends in this area. Dr. Mohn, 80, is survived by his wife, Edith, and two daughters.

Funeral services will be held on Friday, Jan. 26 at 2 p.m. at the Palo Alto Methodist Church.

Irving Sommer, board president, told Cameron that the school board would abide by Zellner's decision and that the board had no official policy on the purchase, rental or repair of musical instruments.

The school board informally agreed to add another driver education course and teacher next year after Mrs. Pauline Peterson, district superintendent, explained that approximately 160 will be taking the driving course.

Included in that total, Mrs. Peterson said, would be 31 students who will be attending tenth grade in Notre Dame Catholic High School, East Stroudsburg.

New state law

Under a new state law, public schools must provide the course for pupils who live in their district, but attend private or parochial schools.

The board directed Mrs. Peterson to study the possibility of placing fulltime school bus drivers in the district on the Blue Cross-Blue Shield group plan.

T. B. Courtright, district business manager, told the board that James LaCoe, a Monroe County health inspector, filed a report which claimed that poor lighting conditions exist in all schools in the district.

Mrs. Peterson said that the Department of Public Instruction has informed her that the lighting systems do not have to be replaced until new lighting systems are installed. This is based on the fact that the DPI approved the lighting when it was originally installed.

Courtright informed the board that because of a clerical error, the DPI had made a $1,736 overpayment on its reimbursement for renovations to the Hummel School.

The DPI has asked the board to make a refund in the amount of the overpayment.

The board approved permanent status for Mrs. Wesley Crowther as a librarian in the junior-senior high school until the end of the present term at a salary of $25-per-day.

Mrs. Crowther will replace Mrs. Dolores O'Hara, who has been granted a sabbatical leave.

Three additions
The board also approved three additions to the secondary teachers' substitute list. They were:

Mrs. Jane Romano, Stroudsburg, English and social studies; Mrs. May Ann Salmi, Stroudsburg, mathematics and English; and John L. Balher, a graduate assistant at East Stroudsburg State College.

The Monroe County Youth for Christ, a non-denominational group, was granted the use of a classroom to hold meetings.

Jerold Fritz, administrative assistant to the superintendent, was placed in charge of a district-wide census which will be taken this year at a cost of $1,000.

Fritz told the board that by cooperating with the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission, it will be possible to develop a land use map which will have the location of every home in the district.

The board also adopted a calendar for the 1968-1969 school year, which will be used by all four school districts in the county.

Attendee at the National assistant high school principal, meeting in Atlantic City, Feb. 10 to 14 was approved for Ralph O. Burrows, high school principal, and Cummings Platt, high school principal.

Mrs. Peterson, Joseph Kulick, Middle Smithfield School principal, and John Lambert, supervisor of elementary education, will attend a conference of the American Assn. of School Administrators in Atlantic City Feb. 17 to 21.

'Y' drive goes over $2,000

STROUDSBURG — The 1968 Monroe County YMCA Sustaining and Century Club Fund Campaign has passed the $2,000 mark, Robert L. Clark, chairman of the drive, said Tuesday night.

Meeting with Division leaders, Clark said, "The general public has shown with their contributions that the YMCA has a definite role in the future of the Pocono Mountains."

He went on to say, "During the next three weeks the board of directors of the YMCA will be making their reports on the sustaining and Century Club campaign. I am optimistic that their efforts will surpass previous marks."

He noted that YMCA Sunday was observed in area churches. "The churches are cooperating with us in this endeavor. Like all interested laymen they see the 'Y' as the beacon in Monroe County today and tomorrow."

Sessions scheduled

Clark has scheduled sessions with Division leaders later in the month, before kicking off the second phase of the YMCA Fund Campaign.

"The ground work is being laid in the sustaining and Century Club drive. However, the backbone of the YMCA and what it stands for lies in the actual membership campaign which will be held throughout the month of February," he pointed out.

"When we get this physical and spiritual plant bulging with youngsters and teenagers via actual memberships, then we know we have the ingredients for a better society in the Pocono Mountains," he said.

Plans call for three dinner sessions during February, the first on Feb. 15, followed by meetings on Feb. 22 and 29.

Campaign reports will be given at all of the sessions slated for the YMCA in Stroudsburg.

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Civil Defense office in East Stroudsburg will conduct a reorganization meeting Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. at the Boro building in the council chambers.

Musical instrument talks hit sour note before board

EAST STROUDSBURG — The director of the East Stroudsburg Area band department Monday night strongly defended a firm which has been supplying the school district musical instruments and repair service.

During a school board meeting in the junior-senior high school, Robert Zellner refused a claim that a Stroudsburg music store could provide the same service.

Jay Cameron, owner of the Mainline Music Store, asked to be given equal consideration with Charles and Mary, Wilkes-Barre.

Cameron claimed that his location would enable him to provide better service to band members who bought instruments in his store.

Musical tests

At East Stroudsburg, which has one of the best band programs in the state, young students are given musical aptitude tests to determine their potential for playing a musical instrument.

If a student shows potential ability, his parents are sent a letter explaining the school's program.

Zellner claimed that while the letter mentions the Wilkes-Barre firm, it is also made clear that parents can buy instruments from anyone they wish.

Zellner said that Cameron's approach to the situation was "all wrong." He indicated that the matter should have been pursued with the school administration and not brought before the school board.

Cameron maintained that he was forced to go before the school board because school administrators are unwilling to make changes.

Obituaries

Former area resident dies at 80

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Dr. E. Harold Mohn, a summer resident of the area for many years, died last Friday in the Palo Alto Hospital in California after a brief illness.

Dr. Mohn was superintendent of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Church when he bought Mohncrest above the village 35 years ago and he and his family have summered here since that time.

At the time of his death, Dr. Mohn was executive director of and Cultivation of the Methodist Church.

He has often preached at local churches and has many friends in this area. Dr. Mohn, 80, is survived by his wife, Edith, and two daughters.

Funeral services will be held on Friday, Jan. 26 at 2 p.m. at the Palo Alto Methodist Church.

Irving Sommer, board president, told Cameron that the school board would abide by Zellner's decision and that the board had no official policy on the purchase, rental or repair of musical instruments.

The school board informally agreed to add another driver education course and teacher next year after Mrs. Pauline Peterson, district superintendent, explained that approximately 160 will be taking the driving course.

Included in that total, Mrs. Peterson said, would be 31 students who will be attending tenth grade in Notre Dame Catholic High School, East Stroudsburg.

New state law

Under a new state law, public schools must provide the course for pupils who live in their district, but attend private or parochial schools.

The board directed Mrs. Peterson to study the possibility of placing fulltime school bus drivers in the district on the Blue Cross-Blue Shield group plan.

T. B. Courtright, district business manager, told the board that James LaCoe, a Monroe County health inspector, filed a report which claimed that poor lighting conditions exist in all schools in the district.

Mrs. Peterson said that the Department of Public Instruction has informed her that the lighting systems do not have to be replaced until new lighting systems are installed. This is based on the fact that the DPI approved the lighting when it was originally installed.

Courtright informed the board that because of a clerical error, the DPI had made a $1,736 overpayment on its reimbursement for renovations to the Bunnell School.

The DPI has asked the board to make a refund in the amount of the overpayment.

The board approved permanent status for Mrs. Wesley Crowther as a librarian in the junior-senior high school until the end of the present term at a salary of $25-per-day. Mrs. Crowther will replace Mrs. Dolores O'Hara, who has been granted a sabbatical leave.

Three additions

The board also approved three additions to the secondary teachers' substitute list. They were:

Mrs. Jane Romano, Stroudsburg, English and social studies; Mrs. Mary Ann Salmi, Stroudsburg, mathematics and English; and John L. Balher, a graduate assistant at East Stroudsburg State College.

The Monroe County Youth for Christ, a non-denominational group, was granted the use of a classroom to hold meetings of Campus Life, a club for teenagers.

Jerrold Fritz, administrative assistant to the superintendent, was placed in charge of a district-wide census which will be taken this year at a cost of $1,000.

Fritz told the board that by cooperating with the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission, it will be possible to develop a land use map which will have the location of every home in the district.

The board also adopted a calendar for the 1968-1969 school year, which will be used by all four school districts in the county.

Attendance at the National assistant high school principal meeting in Atlantic City, Feb. 10 to 14 was approved for Ralph O. Burrows, high school principal, and Cummings Platt, high school principal.

Mrs. Peterson, Joseph Kulick, Middle Smithfield School principal, and John Lambert, supervisor of elementary education, will attend a conference of the American Assn. of School Administrators in Atlantic City Feb. 17 to 21.

State police have Girl Friday

By JIM SHAFER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Pennsylvania State Police in Stroudsburg have done it again and with beauty this time.

Miss Gloria Brutchak of 84 Knob Rd., Mount Pocono, has been hired by State Police for general office duties in the Stroudsburg substation.

This is the first time a woman has been hired to work in a substation under the command of Capt. James Straub, Hazleton station, and if it proves to give police more time for traffic patrols and criminal investigation it could spread throughout the state.

Gloria, who graduated in 1966 from Gilderland High School,

Albany, N.Y., and then moved to Mount Pocono with her parents, has a very pleasant voice and is even more pleasant to meet in person.

She works at a desk, just inside the front door. While she was talking on the telephone, Trooper Kenneth Minehart stood looking over her shoulder observing her making a notation in the desk log.

Conversation indicated she's happy with her new job.

"I think it is just great. I've been here since the 15th of the month (January) and every day has been just a little bit different. The work basically is the same each day but each time the phone rings the situation is different," Gloria said with a smile on her face.

Her work is general office duties. She comes to work at 8 a.m. and is finished at 5 p.m. During this time she answers the telephone, types police reports, files reports, and sends teletype messages.

"She is a regular wizz on the teletype," one of the troopers said as she explained her duties.

"Eventually, she will be using the radio to send and receive messages to patrol cars on the road," Sgt. James Grace, noncommissioned officer in charge of the substation, said.

As she talked some of the other troopers passing through the office, had a word or two to say, most of it kidding.

"I don't mind them kidding me. After I'm here awhile and get to know them I'll kid right along with them. Right now I'm interested in learning all my duties here. After that comes the joking with the troopers when they start kidding me," Gloria said.

All the troopers are willing to lend her a hand in showing her how this or that form should be completed.

Gloria is a small girl with blond hair and is very pleasant to talk with. "When I'm not working I like to go skiing and when the weather is warm I like to swim," she added.

Gloria is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Brutchak of Mount Pocono. Her father is employed at Tobyhanna Army Depot.

ESSC's human performance lab

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles on new Koehler Field House at East Stroudsburg State College.

By PETE GRADY
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — A formidable battery of machines and devices designed to measure the efficiency of man at work and play, with the accent on youth and scientific research, stares out at the perplexed visitor to the Human Performance Laboratory in Koehler Field House at East Stroudsburg State College.

The scientific names of some of these machines trip the tongue and jar the mind. Would you like to have an electromyograph? How about a ride on the Godard bicycle while an ergometer measures your wing possibility?

Another elongated word dribbler is anthropometrics, a branch of anthropology that deals with the measurement of the human body to determine differences in races and individuals.

Individuals, not races are tested at the human performance lab, to see how efficient their human machinery rates before, during and after exercise.

Dr. Frank Sills, head of the Physical, Health and Education Department at ESSC, explained through, the use of one on the human performance machines how to find where a golfer's correct weight should be.

A subject stands on the "force platform," a delicate but firm metal plate from which is recorded three different dimensional forces: lateral anterior-posterior and vertical. These forces are then integrated into a evaluations reveals exactly where a given force is applied to a particular part of the body.

If a golfer comes too far back on his right foot, the machine will detect the error.

In cardio-vascular research, the pulse rate, blood pressure and electrocardiogram of athletes and non-athletes can be compared in evaluating a good conditioned body and a body in fair condition. Also an athlete who has been out of condition and then return to top form.

Devices used in anthropometrics include sliding calipers which measure the length of body parts, skin fold calipers which evaluate normal body fat, and typing a body according to the three main classifications: endomorph, the heavy build; mesomorph, sturdy or muscular build and ectomorph, lean body.

Body typing In body typing, an extension of the anthropometric program, certain types can be related to specific sports. In football a full back or interior lineman is usually a mesomorph. Most basketball players are combinations of meso-ectos; and gymnasts usually have the upper body of a mesomorph and the lower body of an ectomorph. Divers fall in the same category except they usually have shorter legs.

Another device, still in the design stage, is an underwater weighing tank to measure body density. Sills maintains that body tissue density is greater in a well-conditioned person than one who is in poor condition. The subject is put in a sling under the water and measured for density weight and then weighed out of water.

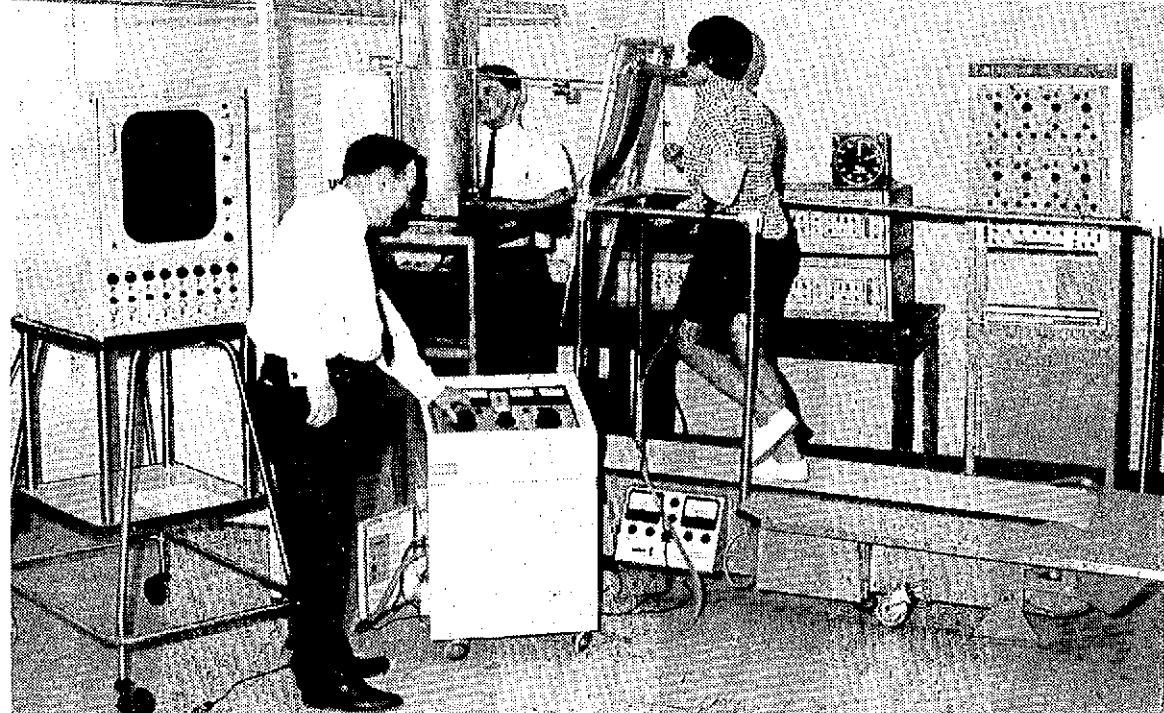

Sills believes there will be a time when certain techniques will be able to measure what percent of the body is made up of muscle, bone, fat and tissue. He also believes that through "quantitative evaluation" it will be possible to predict the weight and growth pattern of a human.

Losing weight and regular exercise can increase human efficiency as much as three percent, according to Dr. Sills. This might not seem like a large increase but Dr. Sills pointed out that the human body, not a very efficient engine, being able to increase its efficiency by three percent, represents a major boost in efficiency.

Two instruments that evaluate the work load of a subject are the Godard bicycle ergometer and the treadmill. A respirator measures the various functions of the lungs: capacity, respiratory rate and minute volume.

Other pieces of equipment in the human performance lab include a tensionmeter which measures the force of a muscle; stroboscopic cameras for time and motion studies and an electromyograph which measures muscle voltage.

"All our equipment are contributing factors to better health through scientific study and evaluation of a student's lungs and heart, his coordination, his speed of movement" and his flexibility," Sills said.

Penny Trojan, a graduate assistant in the East Stroudsburg State College Health and Physical Education department, jogs on the treadmill that measures human energy and efficiency as Al Stockholm, assistant professor in the Health and Physical Education department looks at the ink graph and Dr. Frank Sills, (foreground), head of ESSC's Health and Phys. Ed. dept. adjusts dials that measure the patient's blood pressure and heart rate.

Local 'engineers' hold railroads dear

By FRID WALTER
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — The history of the railroad continues. Its economies may force it to become short-lived; but its art and its science remains more than just a casual sport among its devoted supporters: the wave of model railroad clubs.

Keeping the tracks hot and on the move in this area, are the Delaware Water Gap Model Engineers, who maintain a firm interest in the railroad industry, its past and present contributions to the development of this area, with ingenious and authentic replicas of the dwarfs and the giants of the railroad world.

The model engineers, calling themselves the Keystone Connecting Lines, with their present headquarters in the home of Bill Laise, in East Stroudsburg, have a unique history in themselves, with a crafty model railroad development bringing this history back to life.

More than 400 feet of tracks are laid on a 10 by 20-foot area, representing about seven scale miles of track. The model system is based on the "HO" scale and takes four men to operate.

Besides a variety of cars and engines on display, most of them handcrafted, many of them from very basic materials, the additional attractions include a mining operation, an antique trolley, an oldtime flour mill operation, and of course, the roundhouse, which is a circular building for storing or repairing locomotives, built about a turntable.

It is a fascinating sight, for those have had little exposure to railroads and for those that would like to revive some memorable moments. Anyone with a curious mind would remark at such skill and dedication.

The origin of the club dates back to 1939, when it was known as the Pocono Mountain Model Railroad Club. Bernard LaBar and Charles Lanterman, original charter members, still recall some of the old sights.

It was based on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, the Wilkes-Barre and Eastern Line and the old Stroudsburg Street Railway.

One of the attractions at the club is the original collection of photos and post cards tracing the ancestry of the railways to its modern rivals.

The club was reorganized three years ago with the name it bears now. The twelve active members of the group represent interests of wide range of professions, from teacher to plant foreman and their interest now lies in encouraging the young people to participate and accept the challenge of the rail.

Although it is a chartered organization charging a small membership fee, the door is open to any individual curious enough to accept the challenge of such sport.

The organizations slate of officers includes: Jack Swineford, president; Howard Sarley, vice president; Donald Pitzer, secretary and Alex Mundie, Custodian. With regular meetings at the home of Bill Laise, 592 East Broad St., East Stroudsburg.

The second annual open house will be conducted on two Sundays: Jan. 28 and Feb. 4, between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. each day.

Dr. Reese delegate candidate

STROUDSBURG — Dr. Evan C. Reese, Monroe County Republican chairman, announced Tuesday night that he will be a candidate as a delegate to the GOP national convention during the April primary election.

Dr. Reese of East Stroudsburg, will also be a candidate for re-election as county chairman during the primary election.

Dr. Reese said it is important that delegates to the convention from Pennsylvania be loyal to Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's position of favorite son.

The Pennsylvania GOP delegation is expected to go to the convention committed to Gov. Shafer.

Dr. Reese will be seeking to be one of the two delegates which will be elected from the 15th Congressional District.

Barbara Benner of Allentown will also run as a delegate to the convention.

Ted Berger of Allentown is seeking to become one of the two alternate delegates. Berger was publicity director for Lehigh County District Attorney George Joseph when Joseph opposed Congressman Fred B. Rooney in the 1966 general election.

Dr. Reese first ran for countywide office two years ago when he successfully defeated William Quinn for county chairman.

Tri-county health group receives $164,000 grant

EAST STROUDSBURG — The mental health program of Monroe, Carbon and Pike counties has received further financial footing with the approval of a $164,356 staffing grant to the Tri-County Mental Health Assn. facility under construction at the General

Hospital of Monroe County. With anticipated completion and beginning of operation sometime after September of this year, the grant will allow for the funding of 25 full-time professional and technical workers to staff the mental health facility of the hospital, according to Charles E. Swisher, Jr., administrator for the General Hospital.

After several attempts in making the request, final approval was made which required four revisions of the detailed proposal submitted by the coordinator of mental health services for hospitals, Mrs. Beatrice M. Kerner.

The grant will allow for the making of enthusiastic and realistic plans in the securing of a part-time psychiatrist, psychologist, social workers, occupational therapists and other necessary staff members to support the mental health facility.

Once the facility is in operation, a psychiatric clinic containing about 16 beds for in-patients will be in use, but the majority of the services rendered will be out-patient treatment.

"This is a segment of an entire mental health program, the second materializing in the state under the sponsorship of the Compensatory Mental Health Plan of the Health, Education and Welfare Department," Swisher said.

"The staffing grant is programmed on a four-year descending percentage basis for all salaries, explained Swisher. It is an estimate only, to get this program off its feet," Swisher added.

This will be a modern concept of treating mental health patients as it has become a more accepted, necessary and realized program in more recent years.

Once this facility is established in the General Hospital, the services it provides will be purchased and directed by the Tri-County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Program under Thomas Foley, its administrator, according to individual needs upon request from the three counties.

Bangor school interest high

BANGOR — The bid of L. F. Rothchild and Co. of New York City of 5.38655 per cent net interest rate on $3,480,000 for bonds to finance construction of the new junior high school was accepted by the Bangor Area School Board and the school authority in a meeting Tuesday night.

The bid was the only one received and upon the recommendation of financial advisors the bid was accepted.

The bonds will cover a period of 30 years, will be callable in five years, and will be dated Feb. 15, 1968.

The estimated interest to be paid by the district during the 30-year period is $3,477,815, and the average coupon return was given at 5.28147 per cent.

The annual rental for the building will be $232,190. In addition there will be $3,000 in expenses for authority operation.

Stroudsburg Lions Club starts used eyeglass drive

STROUDSBURG — The Lions Club of Stroudsburg has started a collection drive for used eyeglasses from residents of the community. The eyeglasses will be remade before being donated to deserving people throughout the world.

Dave Maxwell, chairman of the project, stated there are collection points at all banks in the area, the General Hospital of Monroe County and the Penn Straud Hotel. All Lions Club members are also collecting glasses. The drive will end in March.

The Lions Club, which is an international organization, is dedicated to supplying glasses to needy persons. The local club holds an annual drive to obtain glasses for the needy.

Committee members at meeting

HARRISBURG — A Democratic slate of statewide candidates for April's primary elections were endorsed by a policy committee during a meeting of the State Democratic Committee in Harrisburg Monday.

State Committeemen Atty. J. Joseph McCluskey, Stroudsburg, 18th Senatorial District, and Harry Ryder, Cresco, 20th Senatorial District, were among 111 certified members of the state committee and a large number of non-members present at the meeting.

A resolution was passed unanimously endorsing Johnson Administration policies and criticizing the "small minority" that were labeled as critical of present policies.

Judge William C. Circone, Allegheny County, was approved as a candidate for the vacancy on the State Superior Court.

It was based on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, the Wilkes-Barre and Eastern Line and the old Stroudsburg Street Railway.

One of the attractions at the club is the original collection of photos and post cards tracing the ancestry of the railways to its modern rivals.

The club was reorganized three years ago with the name it bears now. The twelve active members of the group represent interests of wide range of professions, from teacher to plant foreman and their interest now lies in encouraging the young people to participate and accept the challenge of the rail.

Although it is a chartered organization charging a small membership fee, the door is open to any individual curious enough to accept the challenge of such sport.

The organizations slate of officers includes: Jack Swineford, president; Howard Sarley, vice president; Donald Pitzer, secretary and Alex Mundie, Custodian. With regular meetings at the home of Bill Laise, 592 East Broad St., East Stroudsburg.

The second annual open house will be conducted on two Sundays: Jan. 28 and Feb. 4, between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. each day.

Dr. Reese delegate candidate

STROUDSBURG — Dr. Evan C. Reese, Monroe County Republican chairman, announced Tuesday night that he will be a candidate as a delegate to the GOP national convention during the April primary election.

Dr. Reese of East Stroudsburg, will also be a candidate for re-election as county chairman during the primary election.

Dr. Reese said it is important that delegates to the convention from Pennsylvania be loyal to Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's position of favorite son.

The Pennsylvania GOP delegation is expected to go to the convention committed to Gov. Shafer.

Dr. Reese will be seeking to be one of the two delegates which will be elected from the 15th Congressional District.

Barbara Benner of Allentown will also run as a delegate to the convention.

Ted Berger of Allentown is seeking to become one of the two alternate delegates. Berger was publicity director for Lehigh County District Attorney George Joseph when Joseph opposed Congressman Fred B. Rooney in the 1966 general election.

Dr. Reese first ran for countywide office two years ago when he successfully defeated William Quinn for county chairman.

Tri-county health group receives $164,000 grant

EAST STROUDSBURG — The mental health program of Monroe, Carbon and Pike counties has received further financial footing with the approval of a $164,356 staffing grant to the Tri-County Mental Health Assn. facility under construction at the General Hospital of Monroe County. With anticipated completion and beginning of operation sometime after September of this year, the grant will allow for the funding of 25 full-time professional and technical workers to staff the mental health facility of the hospital.

according to Charles E. Swisher, Jr., administrator for the General Hospital.

After several attempts in making the request, final approval was made which required four revisions of the detailed proposal submitted by the coordinator of mental health services for hospitals, Mrs. Beatrice M. Kerner.

Bangor school interest high

BANGOR — The bid of L. F. Rothchild and Co. of New York City of 5.38655 per cent net interest rate on $3,460,000 for bonds to finance construction of the new junior high school was accepted by the Bangor Area School Board and the school authority in a meeting Tuesday night.

The bid was the only one received and upon the recommendation of financial advisors the bid was accepted.

The bonds will cover a period of 30 years, will be callable in five years, and will be dated Feb. 15, 1968.

The estimated interest to be paid by the district during the 30-year period is $3,477,845, and the average coupon return was given at 5.28147 per cent.

The annual rental for the building will be $232,190. In addition there will be $3,000 in expenses for authority operation.

The grant will allow for the making of enthusiastic and realistic plans in the securing of a part-time psychiatrist, psychologist, social workers, occupational therapists and other necessary staff members to support the mental health facility.

Once the facility is in operation, a psychiatric clinic containing about 16 beds for in-patients will be in use, but the majority of the services rendered will be out-patient treatment.

"This is a segment of an entire mental health program, the second materializing in the state under the sponsorship of the Compensatory Mental Health Plan of the Health, Education and Welfare Department," Swisher said.

"The staffing grant is programmed on a four-year descending percentage basis for all salaries, explained Swisher. It is an estimate only, to get this program off its feet," Swisher added.

This will be a modern concept of treating mental health patients as it has become a more accepted, necessary and realized program in more recent years.

Once this facility is established in the General Hospital, the services it provides will be purchased and directed by the Tri-County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Program under Thomas Foley, its administrator, according to individual needs upon request from the three counties.

Nazareth wins first half flag

By TED WISMER

BANGOR — Any night a team can hold Frank Scagliotta to less than 10 points it has a good chance of knocking off Nazareth.

Nazareth's tough man-to-man defense held Scagliotta to only nine points Tuesday night as the Blue Eagles dumped the Slaters, 51-42 and capture the first half championship in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division.

The Eagle defense was so tough that Scagliotta, who had 293 points in his first 13 games, didn't score a field goal until 1:48 remained in the third period. Bangor's flashy backcourt performer missed his first eight shots from the floor and finished with a dismal 3 for 17.

But Scagliotta wasn't the only Slater bothered by the Nazareth defense. As a team, Bangor made only 15 of 52 attempts from the floor. Nazareth didn't have a particular good night either as it hit on only 14 of 42 shots. But from the foul line, the Eagles made 23 of 32 as compared to 12 for 20.

Nazareth also beat the taller Slaters on the boards as it had a 46-26 edge in rebounds. Terry Stewart and Al Decker grabbed 13 and 11 respectively while John Swope had 8 for the losers.

Cold from foul line
Nazareth never trailed after opening up an 11-point lead at the start of the second period but several times the Slaters cut the deficit to three.

Bangor's last big chance to overtake Nazareth came with the Eagles holding a 43-36 lead. Swope hit on a shot from the corner and Brad Farino, who limited Tom Acker to only two field goals, scored on a driving layup to cut the gap to 43-40.

Then with 3:13 left, Acker made two pressure fouls and Nazareth once again owned a five-point lead. Farino had a chance to reduce the lead to two, but missed a foul with 1:56 left with the 1-1 in effect.

Fifty seconds later, Ridley Hughes hit a short jumper and as the ball was in the air, Ted Williams was fouled underneath the basket. Two fouls by Williams would have cut the gap to one, but he missed his first attempt and Al Decker came up with the all-important rebound.

Bangor was then forced to foul to try and get the ball and the Eagles made six of eight attempts to send the Slaters to only their second defeat in 14 outings.

Last tie (6-6)
The final tie of the game came late in the first period on a jumper by Swope. Nazareth scored the final four points of the period and then outscored Bangor, 8-1 in the first three minutes of the second period to open an 18-7 lead.

Bangor then forced the Eagles into five ball-handling mistakes and went on a 10-2 spree and cut the gap to 20-17. But in the final minute of the period, Acker hit a pair of fouls and Paul Stocker a long jumper to give Nazareth a 26-19 lead before Scagliotta made two fouls with time running out.

Acker had 15 for the Eagles while Swope with 11 was Bangor's only performer in twin figures.

Medwick delivers on final time at bat

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe "Ducky" Medwick, the cocky, swaggering batting leader of St. Louis' rambunctious Gas House Gang, made baseball's Hall of Fame in his last time at bat in the writers' election Tuesday.

The former star Cardinal outfielder was named on 240, or 84.8 per cent, of the 283 ballots cast by writers who have been members of the Baseball Writers Association of America for a minimum of 10 years.

It was necessary to get 213, or 75 per cent, of the votes for election. Roy Campanella, the one-time catcher great of the Brooklyn Dodgers and a three-time winner of the National League's Most Valuable Player Award, missed election by only eight votes. He received 205.

"It's wonderful," said Medwick by telephone from St. Louis. "For one of the few times in my life I'm speechless."

Noisy but
Medwick's bat made considerable noise during a colorful career that spanned 17 National League seasons, 10 of them with the Cardinals and the others with the Dodgers, New York Giants and Boston Braves.

Rated one of the game's greatest right-handed hitters, Medwick captured the NL's triple crown in 1937 with a .374 batting average, 154 runs batted in and 31 home runs, the latter tying Mel Ott of the Giants.

"I never really was a home run hitter. I concentrated on driving in runs," Medwick recalled Tuesday. He got his nickname because his walk resembled a duck's.

His career record includes a .324 batting average and 205 homers.

This was Medwick's last chance to make the Hall of Fame on the vote of the baseball writers in the 1958 Hall of Fame balloting; a minimum of 213 required for election.

His last season in the big leagues was 1948. If he hadn't made it this time, Medwick would have moved into the old-timers group considered by the Veterans Committee.

Campanella, whose career was tragically ended in January, 1958, when he was paralyzed from injuries suffered in an automobile accident, will be eligible for election by the writers until 1977. Their next vote will be held in January, 1959.

Garvia's field goal gives East Stroudsburg 54-53 win

EAST STROUDSBURG — Joe Garvia's lay-up with seven seconds remaining Tuesday night gave East Stroudsburg a hard-earned 54-53 victory over Wilson in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division.

After trailing by as much as 15 points in the third period, 36-21, the Warriors bounced back on the shooting of Bill Schaeffer and finally went in front, 49-48 with 3:10 remaining.

The lead then changed hands twice and with 20 seconds left and Wilson leading 53-52, Schaeffer had a chance to ice the victory. But he missed twice from the foul line and Garvia then came up with his game-winning field goal with seven seconds left.

East Stroudsburg (3-3) in the first half, reeled off eight straight points in the first period to break a 6-6 tie. The Cavs remained in front then until the fourth period.

Four players hit for double figures for coach Chick Daniels with John Hood the leader with 15. Steve Nauman added 14, Alan Lessig 11 and Garvia 10. Rush Stehlin, Robin Niper and Schaeffer had 17, 14 and 18 points in that order for the Warriors.

John Hood now has 366 points for the season and 161 in six league games.

Wilson pulled out a 54-49 victory in the junior varsity game. Jim Waller had 22 points for the losers.

Medwick delivers on final time at bat

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe "Ducky" Medwick, the cocky, swaggering batting leader of St. Louis' rambunctious Gas House Gang, made baseball's Hall of Fame in his last time at bat in the writers' election Tuesday.

The former star Cardinal outfielder was named on 240, or 84.8 per cent, of the 283 ballots cast by writers who have been members of the Baseball Writers Association of America for a minimum of 10 years.

It was necessary to get 213, or 75 per cent, of the votes for election. Roy Campanella, the one-time catching great of the Brooklyn Dodgers and a three-time winner of the National League's Most Valuable Player Award, missed election by only eight votes. He received 205.

"It's wonderful," said Medwick by telephone from St. Louis. "For one of the few times in my life I'm speechless."

Noisy lot
Medwick's bat made considerable noise during a colorful career that spanned 17 National League seasons, 10 of them with the Cards and the others with the Dodgers, New York Giants and Boston Braves.

Ducky Medwick

Rated one of the game's greatest right-handed hitters, Medwick captured the NL's triple crown in 1937 with a .374 batting average, 154 runs batted in and 31 home runs, the latter tying Mel Ott of the Giants.

"I never really was a home run hitter. I concentrated on driving in runs," Medwick recalled Tuesday. He got his nickname because his walk resembled a duck's.

His career record includes a .324 batting average and 205 homers.

Time running out
This was Medwick's last chance to make the Hall of Fame on the vote of the baseball writers because they vote only on players active in the last 20 years.

His last season in the big leagues was 1948. If he hadn't made it this time, Medwick would have moved into the old-timers group considered by the Veterans Committee.

Campanella, whose career was tragically ended in January, 1958, when he was paralyzed from injuries suffered in an automobile accident, will be eligible for election by the writers until 1977. Their next vote will be held in January, 1969.

East stars rout West; Greer stars
NEW YORK (AP) — Hal Greer scored a record 19 points for one period, 14 in a row, sparking the East to a 144-124 drubbing of the West in the 18th annual National Basketball Association's All-Star game Tuesday night.

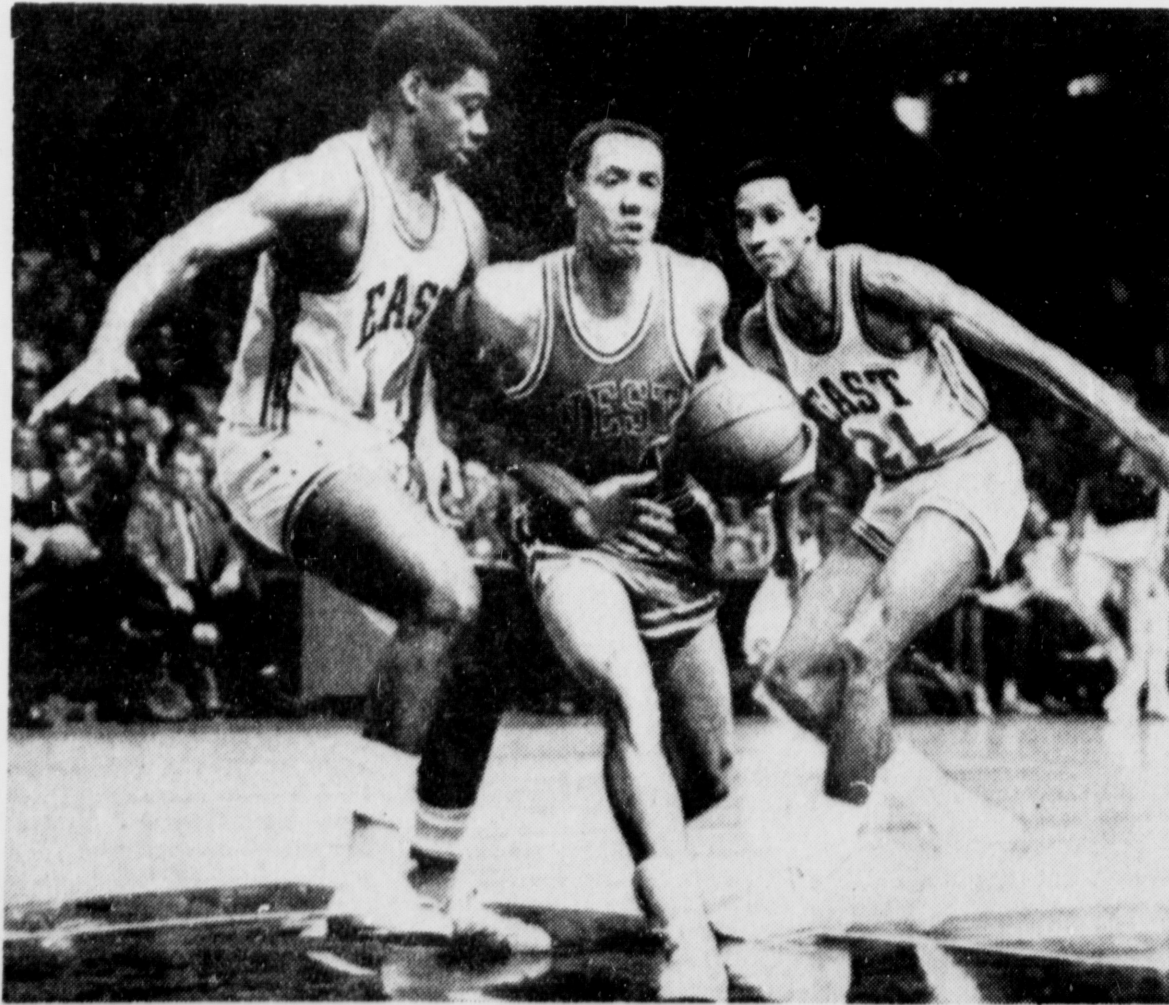

A roaring crowd of 18,422 in Madison Square Garden, largest ever to see an All-Star game, saw Greer, the Philadelphia 76ers' standout guard, set his single quarter scoring record and also win the most valuable player award.

The West never led until Bob Boozer of Chicago put them ahead 71-69 with 8:53 left in the third period. The East then tied it twice before Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles put the West out front for the last time, 75-73 with 7:36 remaining in the quarter.

Greer then exploded for his 14 straight, seven in one minute, while the West was being held scoreless and the East opened up an 87-79 lead. The winners led 101-91 at the end of the quarter and turned the game into a rout in the finale.

Boston's John Havlicek, with 26 points and Greer with 21 were the big scorers for the East which won for the fifth time in six years and built its series margin to 12-6.

The West was led by a trio of Los Angeles Lakers, Baylor with 22, and Jerry West and Archie Clark with 17 each in this last All-Star game in the Garden, scheduled to be replaced by a new complex next month.

Bonnie and Clyde

The first really great stock car drivers in this country were Bonnie and Clyde. They drove for small purses. No one ever bothered to get a clock on them, just a machine gun.

They were slowed down some by running boards. Not because of the air drag in them but because of the policemen and bank clerks on them. Clyde probably still holds the dirt-road Oklahoma unmodified stock-Jordan race around two turns and through a motel rose trolis record.

Since Bonnie and Clyde's day, they have refined the sport to eliminate bullets from the competition. Anyone being shot at is considered to have an unfair advantage.

This modified the sport somewhat in the North Carolina hills, too, because there, at about the same time, some of the world's greatest stock car races were between guys driving (and hauling) 1921 Cases.

Elliot Ness doubtless holds all records for 1927 Kissels. But he was pushed to it by Al Capone. Prohibition did more for stock car racing than the invention of the self-starter...you could always tell the Dixie champion by the holes in his squirrel hat — or the holes in his porcelain jugs. The earliest racers didn't spin in each others' oil, they spun in each others' moonshine.

Since these days, to make money in stock car racing, you don't have to rob banks or make whiskey or hijack rich kids. Today, it's as legitimate as wire-walking, shooting lighted cigarettes out of mouths of ladies in lights and not stockings, fighting bulls, sword-swallowing, or any other of the suicide attempts they sell tickets for.

What has made stock car racing a daylight sport is the emergence of the "factory team."

In the good old days, Detroit wanted to get its cars on color TV all right — but its idea was to show Dinah Shore blowing kisses out of it, or having it parked in front of the Athens Hilton full of ladies in diamond tiaras. Burning on a backstretch was not considered a soft sell, even if it made a double-truck in Life — or the late news.

Stock cars where you have to crawl in the windows in gear you would wear to an oil fire or diving for sunken subs, interiors that make early Christian catacombs look like the bridal suite, are not apt to replace jewelled people getting out of jewelled cars on the back covers of magazines or newspapers, or to be on the halftone commercials.

Detroit still considers the most important automotive advance of apt to go in hook for a hunk of Spartan iron that can outlast and outrun 44 other hunks in a blazing dash around 500 miles of twisting, semi-oval turns, at temperatures you could fry steel in, has altered the hard sell picture somewhat.

Alligator wrestler
What has not changed is the reckless character of the guy in the bucket seat. They are the spiritual successors to the grease-stained wretches who kept Pretty Boy Floyd's getaway car six miles an hour faster than the cops' or the Untouchables' on the straightaway.

Ford's "Toro" team at Riverside's 500 stock car race Sunday has the scholarly, imperious Dan Gurney, who drives with the hauteur of a king's coachman — and it was William Caleb Yarborough, who makes Bonnie and Clyde look like two little old ladies from Pasadena.

In between his bare-knuckle struggles with death by automobile, Cale whistles away the hours fighting ledium by bare-knuckle wrestling with alligators, or diving from hedge-hopping airplanes with chutes that open only when he is close enough to the ground to read street signs.

If William Caleb, who is built along the general lines of a hydrant, were as inaccurate a driver as he is chulst, he would have to phone the Auto Club halfway through the race for directions. He missed the Atlantic Ocean in a jump once and landed on a dentist's office roof. He once cartwheeled so high in a Dixie stock car race he was challenged by the radio tower of the Atlanta airport. If the car holds out and stays low Sunday, he may break Bonnie and Clyde's one-day take-home pay record for standard block stocks.

DRIVING TO FAME - - By Alan Mayer

U.S. bobsledder hurt seriously

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) — Boris Said of Sorset, Vt., suffered multiple injuries, including a broken shoulder and a brain concussion, Sunday in a bobsledding accident during the four-man European championships won by Switzerland.

Said, pilot of USA II, was injured seriously when his sled was hurtled off the track at Tree Corner, a particularly difficult bend midwaydown the icy mile-long Olympic run.

The 36-year-old contractor was rushed to a hospital where officials reported he also suffered facial cuts and eye injuries.

The other three members of the sled team—David Dunn of Elm Grove, Wis., Bob Crowley of Saranac Lake, N.Y., and brakeman Philip Duprey of Raybrook, N.Y.—escaped serious injury.

Winter driving souvenir

A big repair bill came with it. To help you avoid picking up an expensive souvenir, here are four easy-to-follow winter driving tips.

Easy on the power. Spinning your wheels loses you both traction and control.

Easy on the brakes. Pump brake gently and allow extra stopping distance. At only 20 miles an hour in snow, you need 200 feet or more to stop.

Easy on the steering. A sudden turn can throw you into a skid.

Easy on the temper. Life will be calmer... and safer.

Bonnie and Clyde

The first really great stock car drivers in this country were Bonnie and Clyde. They drove for small purses. No one ever bothered to get a clock on them, just a machine gun.

They were slowed down some by running boards. Not because of the air drag in them but because of the policemen and bank clerks on them. Clyde probably still holds the dirt-road Oklahoma unmodified stock-Jordan race around two turns and through a motel rose trellis record.

Since Bonnie and Clyde's day, they have refined the sport to eliminate bullets from the competition. Anyone being shot at is considered to have an unfair advantage.

This modified sport somewhat in the North Carolina hills, too, because there, at about the same time, some of the world's greatest stock car races were between guys driving (and hauling) 1921 Cases.

Elliot Ness doubtless holds all records for 1927 Kissels. But he was pushed to it by Al Capone. Prohibition did more for stock car racing than the invention of the self-starter...you could always tell the Dixie champion by the holes in his squirrel hat — or the holes in his porcelain jugs. The earliest racers didn't spin in each others' oil, they spun in each others' moonshine.

Since these days, to make money in stock car racing, you don't have to rob banks or make whiskey or hijack rich kids. Today, it's as legitimate as wire-walking, shooting lighted cigarettes out of mouths of ladies in tights and net stockings, fighting bulls, sword-swallowing, or any other of the suicide attempts they sell tickets for.

What has made stock car racing a daylight sport is the emergence of the "factory team."

In the good old days, Detroit wanted to get its cars on color TV all right — but its idea was to show Dinah Shore blowing kisses out of it, or having it parked in front of the Athens Hilton full of ladies in diamond tiaras. Burning on a backstretch was not considered a soft sell, even if it made a double-truck in life — or the late news.

Stock cars where you have to crawl in the windows in gear you would wear to an oil fire or diving for sunken subs, interiors that make early Christian catacombs look like the bridal suite, are not apt to replace jeweled people getting out of jeweled cars on the back covers of magazines or newspapers, or to be on the half-time commercials.

Detroit still considers the most important automotive advance of apt to go in hock for a hunk of Spartan iron that can outlast and outrun 44 other hunks in a blazing dash around 500 miles of twisting, semi-oval turns, at temperatures you could fry steel in, has altered the hard sell picture somewhat.

Alligator wrestler
What has not changed is the reckless character of the guy in the bucket seat. They are the spiritual successors to the grease-stained wretches who kept Pretty Boy Floyd's getaway car six miles an hour faster than the cops' or the Untouchables' on the straightaway.

Ford's "Torino" team at Riverside's 500 stock car race Sunday has the scholarly, imperious Dan Gurney, who drives with the hauteur of a king's coachman — and it was William Caleb Yarborough, who makes Bonnie and Clyde look like two little old ladies from Pasadena.

In between his bare-knuckle struggles with death by automobile, Cale whiles away the hours fighting tedium by bare-knuckle wrestling with alligators, or diving from hedge-hopping airplanes with chutes that open only when he is close enough to the ground to read street signs.

If William Caleb, who is built along the general lines of a hydrant, were as inaccurate a driver as he is chutist, he would have to phone the Auto Club halfway through the race for directions. He missed the Atlantic Ocean in a jump once and landed on a dentist's office roof. He once cartwheeled so high in a Dixie stock car race he was challenged by the radio tower of the Atlanta airport. If the car holds out and stays low Sunday, he may break Bonnie and Clyde's one-day take-home pay record for standard block stocks.

For 1967, the Phillies finished second to the Pirates in double plays, 183-174. The last time the Phillies led the NL in double plays was 1937.

Elvin Hayes, star basketball player for the University of Houston during their game with UCLA, studies for a final exam in English. Hayes scored 39 points against UCLA. Cramming for finals leaves little time for celebrating the fact the Uof H has become the number-one basketball team in the nation as shown by national polls Tuesday. (UPI Telephoto)

U.S. bobsledder hurt seriously

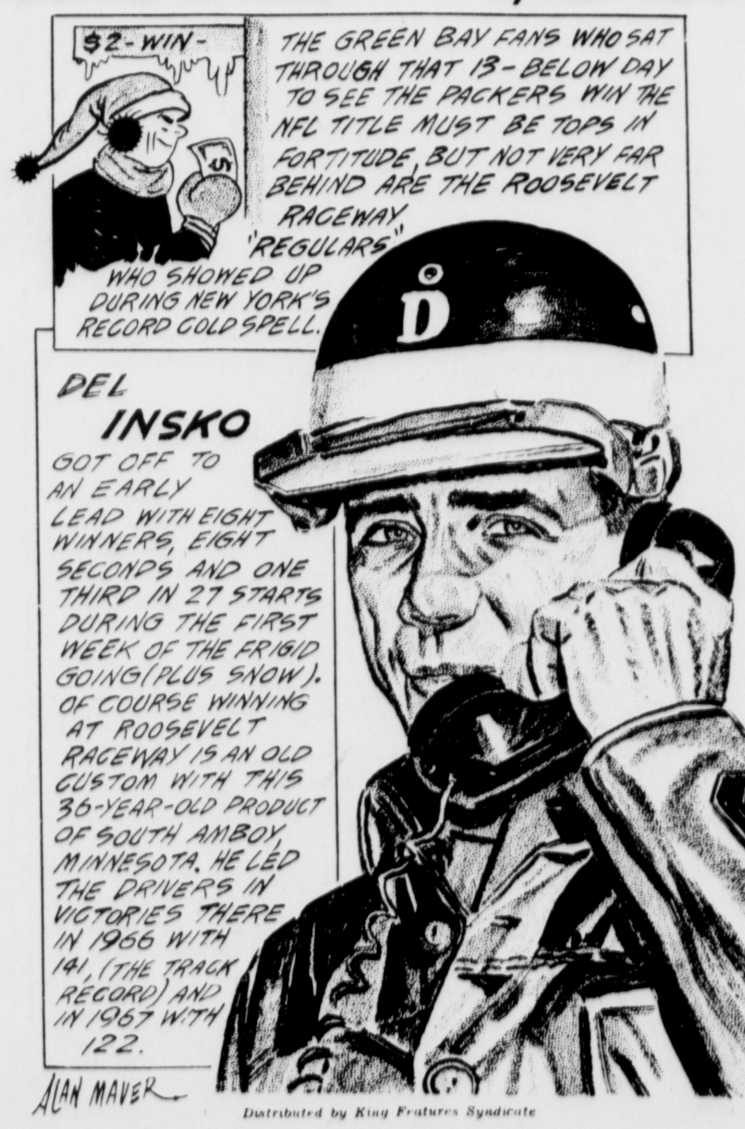

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) — Boris Said of Sorset, Vt., suffered multiple injuries, including a broken shoulder and a brain concussion, Sunday in a bobsledding accident during the four-man European championships won by Switzerland.

Said, pilot of USA III, was injured seriously when his sled was hurtled off the track at Tree Corner, a particularly difficult bend midway down the icy mile-long Olympic run.

The 36-year-old contractor was rushed to a hospital where officials reported he also suffered facial cuts and eye injuries.

The other three members of the sled team—David Dunn of Elm Grove, Wis., Bob Crowley of Saranac Lake, N.Y., and brakeman Philip Duprey of Raybrook, N.Y.—escaped serious injury.

Winter driving souvenir

A big repair bill came with it. To help you avoid picking up an expensive souvenir, here are four easy-to-follow winter driving tips.

Easy on the power. Spinning your wheels loses you both traction and control.

Easy on the brakes. Pump brake gently and allow extra stopping distance. At only 20 miles an hour in snow, you need 200 feet or more to stop.

Easy on the steering. A sudden turn can throw you into a skid.

Easy on the temper. Life will be calmer . . . and safer.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Here is a sample of what some players are inclined to call doing the impossible. West cashes two diamond tricks, and if he were only kind enough to lead another diamond now, it would be easy to make eleven tricks by trumping in dummy and discarding a spade.

But West is a shrewd cookie and doesn't lead another diamond. Instead he leads a trump. Of course, you're now supposed to make the hand; otherwise we wouldn't be talking about it.

Well, this hand represents a type of play which is foreign to some customers, and it is called a squeeze. As soon as some readers hear this, they promptly turn to the financial page.

This is not a bad idea on some days, but, today being the day it is, we have got to see how this squeeze works out or bust. So we win the trump, cash the A-K of hearts, lead a trump to dummy's ace, and ruff a heart.

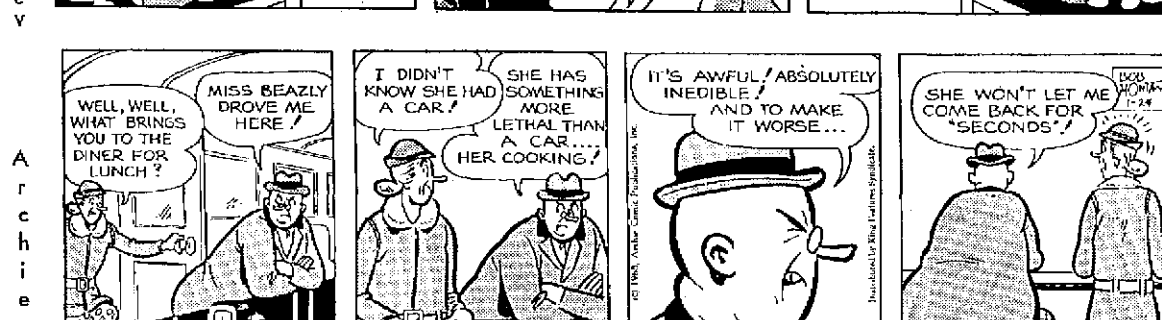

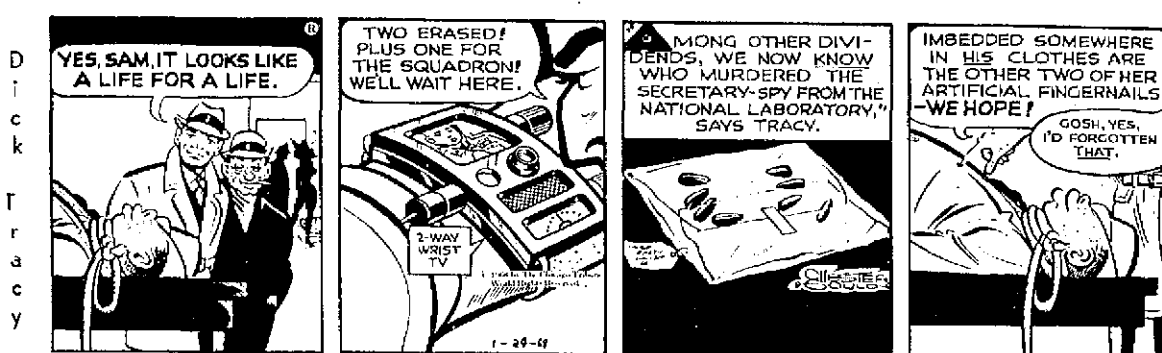

Why do we trump a heart? Because, if we don't, both West and East will have the suit guarded, while if we do only East can guard against dummy's eight of hearts.

Now what is all this leading up to? We shall see what we shall see. South just keeps on leading trumps until he has no more, at which point he has exactly three cards left — the K-4-2 of spades.

Dummy now has the A-9 of spades and the aforesaid eight of hearts.

But East is in bad shape on the last trump lead. He has to choose a discard from a holding of Q-J-10 of spades and jack of hearts, and he is a deceased pigeon, regardless of what he plays on the trump. Not even Houdini could help him. South gets the rest of the tricks.

It just goes to show how easy it is to execute a squeeze.

Two sets of twins — year to day

One of the twin Kodiak bears last year at Houston's Hermann Park Zoo looks disdainfully at his day-old brother and sister, born one year to the day after their older brother. The baby bears sport little white ties around their necks which disappear into a uniform cinnamon color in a short time. Mother Kodiak rejected her two babies last year and has done the same thing this year. Richard Quick, the keeper, and his wife raised the first set of twins and face the same prospects again.

In front by one crawl

Seven-month-old Marty Sabo is out in front by a crawl, but he fell short by eight laps to Kent State's Mike Murray, center, and Ken Lawton, of Pittsburgh, who were warming up prior to an indoor track meet in which Kent State scored a 60-39 victory. An unidentified Kent State runner is pictured on the left.

Check being made on art repair work

Francis Sullivan, resident restorer at the National Art Gallery of Art, left, checks the repair work he has made on the 20-by-30-foot painting, "The Signing of the Constitution," in Washington, D.C. Until recently, the painting hung in the stairwell on the House side of The Capitol. It was taken to the gallery to repair slashes made by a deranged visitor 13 months ago. At right is Stephen S. Story, of New York, a colleague of Sullivan's.

Cat out of the bag

Houston policewoman Judy Bishop holds an Ocelot kitten found in a paper sack in the Houston jail. The cat, which is worth about $300, was apparently left by a prisoner. Miss Bishop is going to take care of the six-week-old kitten until a home is found for the animal.

'Living memorial'

The interior of Ford's Theater shows President Abraham Lincoln's box draped in American flags. The theater, scene of Lincoln's assassination in 1865, was dedicated Sunday after a $2.7 million restoration. The theater is equipped for use as a "living memorial" with dramatic presentations, instead of solely as a museum.

Mail received by Eartha Kitt

Singer Eartha Kitt displays a basketful of mail that she has received since she made her statement to Mrs. Lyndon Johnson during a luncheon in Washington last week. Miss Kitt created a stir during a White House luncheon when she made remarks about crime in the streets and war in Vietnam that left the First Lady nearly in tears.

Farm work employers face deadline on form

STROUDSBURG — January 31 is the deadline for employers of farm workers to file their 1967 Form 943, Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees, and pay the Social Security taxes due, Seymour I. Friedman, district director of Internal Revenue for Eastern Pennsylvania, announced Tuesday.

There is an exception for farm employers who made timely deposits of all social security taxes on wages paid in 1967. They have until February 12 to file Form 943 (with Forms 450 attached) for such taxes.

Cash wages. The tax applies to cash wages of $150 or more paid to each employee in 1967 or cash wages, regardless of amount, if the employee performs agricultural labor on 20 days or more during the year.

The rate of tax for 1967 is 4.4 per cent for the employee plus a similar amount from the employer or a total of 8.8 per cent of the first $8,000 of taxable wages paid.

A "crew leader," a person who furnishes and pays workers to perform agricultural labor on his own behalf or for another, is treated as an employer under the law, Friedman said.

Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, must be furnished each employee paid $600 or more during the year. However, employees paid less than $600 for any wages reportable on Form 943 must be given a statement for social security purposes. Although use of the Form W-2 is preferred, Form SS-14 can be used for this purpose.

Route 80 in New Jersey

Expansion from two to three lanes

TRENTON — A 21.3-mile portion of Interstate Route 80 from Columbia in Warren County to Netcong in Morris County, originally planned for two lanes of traffic in each direction, is being redesigned to provide three lanes each way.

Transportation Commissioner David J. Goldberg announced today.

At the same time, Goldberg said that all of I-80's 68.1 miles in New Jersey either will be completed or under construction by the end of this year, and that the target date for completion of the major transcontinental freeway in the state has been firmed up as the winter of 1970-1971.

Six contract sections are being redesigned. One of them, extending 3.8 miles from County Route 519 to a point east of Shades of Death Road in Warren County, has been under construction since last June, and the design revision has necessitated a temporary suspension of work on two overpasses which are partially completed but which will have to be widened to accommodate the additional lanes.

Initial design. Road bed work that has already been completed will not be affected because it was designed for three lanes each way, even though only two were to be built initially.

Goldberg explained that the Transportation Department's proposal for the wider roadways, stemming from studies which showed that two lanes each way would not be adequate for the expected volume of traffic 20 years from now, was approved by the United States Bureau of Public Roads in December and that design revision started immediately. The studies were part of the department's 1968 estimate of the cost of completing the Interstate System in New Jersey.

The design revision will not impede the stepped-up construction program, Goldberg said.

"I feel certain that the accelerated schedule for finishing this vitally important trans-state facility will be of interest to many New Jersey residents," he said. "Barring abnormal and unforeseeable delays, I am confident we can accomplish it."

Probable cost. The total number of miles of I-80 to be placed under construction this year is 22.7, at a cost that probably will exceed $5 million, exclusive of right of way expenditures.

To date, 26.5 miles have been completed and 18.8 miles are already under construction.

The highway is open in Warren County from the point where it enters New Jersey at the Water Gap Bridge to Columbia, a distance of 4.9 miles. It is also open in Morris County from Netcong to Denville, 12.5 miles. Another 9.1-mile section from Beckwith Ave. in Paterson, Passaic County, to its eastern terminus, Interstate Route 95 in Bergen County, also is open.

In addition to the 3.8-mile section in Warren County which is being redesigned, other portions now under construction are seven-tenths of a mile from Route 46 to Route 51 in Denville, 13.7 miles from Parsippany-Troy Hills Twp. in Morris County to New St. in Paterson, and another seven-tenths of a mile west of Beckwith Ave. in Paterson.

Included are a major interchange with routes 46 and 23 in Wayne Township and Totowa in Passaic County, and a major bridge over the Passaic River between Totowa and West Paterson. New Jersey's portion of I-80 will cost an estimated $397.8 million, of which $187 million has already been expended. For the most part, the federal government bears 90 per cent of the cost and the Department of Transportation 10 per cent.

One of I-80's principal benefits to New Jersey will be to relieve overcrowded Route 46, leaving that artery to serve local and commuter traffic.
